Court tightens pornography restrictions!

'Social value' doctrine now more relaxed

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a 5-4 decision reversing a decade-long trend toward permissiveness, the Supreme Court today severely restricted the range of pornography protected by the Constitution.

In an opinion written by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, the court held:

—Local community standards rather than national standards may be used in determining whether material is obscene and therefore not protected by the Constitution.

—That juries and courts no longer need to find that material is "utterly" without redeeming social value before they declare it obscene.

Instead, Burger wrote, they may determine whether the work "taken as a whole lacks serious literary artistic, political, or scientific value."

"Hard core" pornography was the target of Burger's opinion.

"One can concede that the 'sexual revolution' of recent years may have had useful byproducts in striking layers of prudery from a subject long irrationally kept from needed ventilation," Burger wrote.

"But it does not follow that no regulation of patently offensive 'hard core' materials is needed or permissible; civilized people do not allow unregulated access to heroin because it is a derivative of medicinal morphines," Burger continued in the majority opinion.

He was joined by the three other appointees of President Nixon, Justices Harry A. Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell Jr., and William H. Rehnquist, and veteran court member Byron R. White.

Burger noted that for the first time since the court declared obscenity to be beyond the protection of the First Amendment in 1957, "a majority of this court has agreed on concrete guidelines to isolate 'hard core' pornography from expression protected by the First Amendment."

Critics of a standard based on local community attitudes have complained that it would require publishers, motion picture producers and others to produce material that would meet the standards of the nation's most prudish community.

Nuclear agreement from summit talks?

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — The leader of the world's two most powerful nations, Richard M. Nixon and Leonid I. Brezhnev, are poised to sign a breakthrough document designed to eventually corral the threat of nuclear devastation.

The agreement, which provides instructions to technical experts stalemated in Geneva, at the Strategic Arms Limitation talks (SALT), was molded by Nixon and Brezhnev on the third day of their summit talks.

The leaders planned to return their travelling summit to Washington from this hideaway mountain compound today to formally sign the broadly worded accord in the gilded grandeur of the White House. Signing also was scheduled for a bilateral pact pledging coperation on the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

Nixon and Brezhnev, who came to this presidential retreat 75 miles northwest of Washington Tuesday night, spent most of Wednesday afternoon and evening talking about international issues and the stalled efforts to achieve permanent limitations on their countries' massive nuclear arsenals.

As they began Wednesday's session, Brezhnev told newsmen that his talks with Nixon "without question," would produce "good results."

The agreement giving instructions to the Geneva SALT negotiators is not a treaty, but is considered essential to get the stalled arms limitations talks moving again.

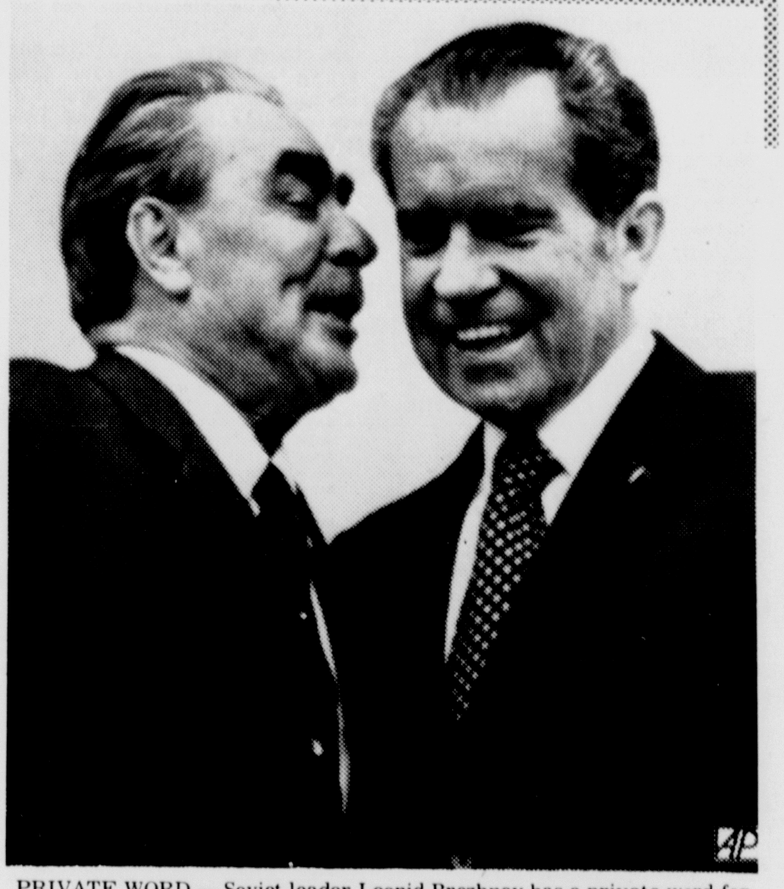

It could rival in importance the pair of pacts reached last spring in Moscow when Nixon and Brezhnev held their first summit. Those accords placed permanent limits on nuclear defense systems and a five-year limitation on some offensive missiles.

Before coming to Camp David, Nixon and Brezhnev witnessed the signing of four modest bilateral agreements on agricultural, oceanographic, transportation and cultural exchanges.

Then, while they were at the presidential retreat Wednesday, lower-level officials signed a reciprocal income tax agreement.

Brezhnev is to host a banquet for Nixon and other ranking U.S. officials tonight at the Soviet Embassy, before meeting Friday morning with 40 select representatives of the American business community—presumably to encourage U.S. investment in his country.

Late Friday, the two leaders head west for Nixon's San Clemente, Calif., villa where they will continue the talks until Sunday, when Brezhnev heads back for Washington and a Monday departure from the United States.

PRIVATE WORD — Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev has a private word for President Nixon as the two stand on balcony at the White House.

Slayer Keaton captured near scene of escape

Convicted murderer Cleo Vernon Keaton, 35, of Dayton, who escaped Friday from the Lima State Hospital for the Criminally Insane, was captured Wednesday night in Cairo, eight miles north of the institution.

Arresting officers said Keaton offered no resistance.

Keaton and George Fisher, 23, of Columbus, escaped from the hospital Friday after they removed a lock from a courtyard door then piled mattresses and springs to clear the 25 foot wall surrounding the hospital.

They were at first thought to have headed for Columbus where Fisher had relatives.

Keaton, known as "the Good Samaritan killer" was convicted of the murder of Maurice Francis of Williamsport in March of 1965. Francis had stopped to help Keaton with his disabled car when he was gunned down.

Keaton at that time was fleeing from presecution from three shootings in Dayton, two of which resulted in deaths.

A Pickaway County jury convicted Keaton of first degree murder in the killing. He was sentenced to death in the electric chair.

Controversial farm plan OKd

WASHINGTON (AP) — After accepting a new subsidy limit and a target price plan to support major commodities, the House Agriculture Committee has tentatively approved a farm bill loaded with controversy.

The panel, finishing its preliminary chores Wednesday with a 28 to 4 vote favoring its draft version of the new general farm legislation, arranged to meet today for its final decisions on the massive package.

It includes a $37,500 per crop annual subsidy payment ceiling instead of the current $55,000 level. A Senate-passed version would put a $20,000 annual subsidy limit on each farmer. The House, in a key vote last Friday on the Agriculture Department appropriation bill, decided to go along with the Senate's $20,000-a-farmer approach and went another step by voting to bar the sale or lease of cotton acreage allotments after Dec. 31.

As the House committee put the last touches on its draft of the general farm bill Wednesday, Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz pledged to battle proposals which would provide guaranteed prices for wheat, corn and cotton that are above levels urged by the Nixon administration.

Under terms of the legislation, basically similar to the Senate-passed bill, the existing 1970 law—due to expire Dec. 31—would be changed by setting up a so-called target price concept of supports under cotton, wheat and feed grains such as corn and grain sorghums.

This would mean crop subsidies, running some $3.5 billion a year, would be eliminated as long as there is a continuation of existing relationships between farm prices and crop production costs. If prices farmers get should drop sharply while production costs go up or remain unchanged, then they would get subsidy payments.

Under the four-year House committee bill, target prices for the first year would be $2.05 a bushel for wheat, $1.38 a bushel for corn and 38 cents a pound for cotton. The figures in the five-year Senate-passed bill are $2.28 for wheat, $1.53 for corn and 43 cents for cotton.

Indictees arraigned

'Not guilty' is plea in murder case

Two persons, indicted by the Fayette County grand jury, appeared before Common Pleas Judge Evelyn W. Coffman Wednesday afternoon to enter pleas to the charges against them.

John Allen Brown pleaded not guilty to a charge of second degree murder, and Oval McCallister pleaded guilty to a charge of stabbing with intent to wound.

Brown, 21, of Frankfort, is charged with the fatal shooting of Demeatris Winfield, 17, Chillicothe girl at a Gregg Street residence in April. Judge Coffman did not announce a trial date.

McCallister, of Rt. 4, Washington C.H., was charged after he allegedly stabbed his son following a domestic quarrel at their former residence in Bloomingburg. The penalty for the crime to which he made the guilty plea is from 1 to 20 years in the State Penitentiary. Judge Coffman will await a full investigation of the facts and circumstances leading up to the stabbing before she sets a date for sentencing.

A third person, indicted by the grand jury, Harley Miley, of Hillsboro, was scheduled to appear, but it was reported that his attorney was unable to be present. A new date for his arraignment will be set after his attorney is contacted.

Miley is charged with incest, statutory rape and indecent assault. Miley, who allegedly had licentious relationships with three minor girls near Jeffersonville in February, is being held in the county jail.

Living costs spurt again during May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher costs for food, clothing and gasoline pushed consumer prices up sharply again last month, the government reported today. The increase was at a slightly slower rate than in April, however.

The Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics reported the rise in the cost of living in May at six-tenths of one per cent. This works out to an annual rate of 7.2 per cent, down from the 8.4 per cent annual rate of increase that was projected in April.

In a separate report, the bureau said the purchasing power of workers declined last month because of price increases.

Food again accounted for a big rise in the cost of living, increasing nine-tenths of 1 per cent in May to a level 14.5 per cent above a year ago. On a seasonally adjusted basis, grocery prices rose 1.1 per cent in May.

Report Nixon was bugged in '68

WASHINGTON (AP) — The late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover once told President Nixon that electronic surveillance had been used against Nixon in the 1968 presidential campaign, John W. Dean III has quoted the President as saying.

Nixon is said to have replied he would have to use bugging to his own advantage sometime in the future.

That exchange is reported in an official summary of Dean's closed-door testimony before the Senate Watergate committee last Saturday.

The summary gives few details. Sources close to the investigation said Wednesday the conversation was not pursued at the executive session and the fired White House counsel indicated he would explain it further at the committee's televised hearings next week.

The White House has refused to comment on Dean's testimony until after he appears "in public under oath."

The summary gave this account of a meeting between Nixon, Dean and former presidential Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman last Sept. 15, the day a federal grand jury returned indictments against seven men in the Watergate break-in and bugging case:

"Dean met with the President after the indictments had been handed down. Nixon said Haldeman reported what a good job Dean had done.

"Nixon said that Hoover had told him that Nixon had been bugged in the 1968 campaign, and Nixon said that sometime in the future they would have to use it to their advantage."

A source close to the investigation was asked if the summary meant Nixon planned to use the report that he was bugged as a political issue or planned to use bugging.

"He meant bugging others," the source said, referring to Dean's account of the conversation.

The summary also said Dean told investigators that the White House and the Committee for the Re-election of the President sabotaged a House committee's pre-election investigation of the Watergate affair, on President Nixon's orders.

Rep Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, wanted to conduct a full-scale investigation of the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic headquarters after his staff learned that campaign funds routed through a Mexican bank were used to help finance the operation.

Patman became embroiled in a struggle with a Republican member of his committee, Rep. Garry Brown of Michigan, over whether the probe was to continue, and the battle climaxed Oct. 3 with a 20 to 15 committee vote against granting subpoena power for the investigation.

Brown said in an interview Wednesday that his fight with Patman started before Dean's meeting with the President and that he knew of no pressure applied to anyone on the committee by the White House.

Gun battle mars Peron return

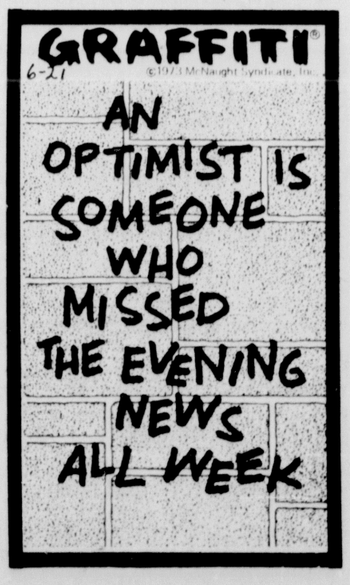

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentine strongman Juan D. Peron spent his first night home from exile under tight security after gunfire left 13 persons dead by official count and more than 250 wounded in a huge welcoming crowd.

Peron and his third wife, Isabel, were at the official presidential residence in suburban Olivos. Security measures there were stricter than those around his chalet in another neighborhood.

The former dictator planned to hold a news conference tonight.

The violence erupted Wednesday morning when gunfire crackled through a throng of two million gathered near Buenos Aires airport to greet the 77-year-old leader.

Local newspapers, after checking hospitals, put the death toll between 20 and 30 and the number of wounded around 400.

Weather

Partly cloudy tonight and Friday. Lows tonight in the 50s, highs Friday again around 80.

Ohio Bell bid nixed by justices

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Supreme Court says it has no authority to order the Public Utilities Commission to grant the Ohio Bell Telephone Co. an emergency rate increase.

The court was requested by Ohio Bell to order an emergency increase or set a date when the rate increase would be decided.

The PUCO argued that it alone has authority to decide what rates should be and it was no business of the court, a spokesman said.

Ohio Bell requested a $115 million, or 18 per cent, rate increase.

SEN. DONALD LUKENS

Court rules Lukens off ballot

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Supreme Court ruled that state Sen. Donald E. "Buz" Lukens is not eligible to be a candidate for any political office in 1974.

The high court Wednesday, in an unanimous decision, upheld Secretary of State Ted W. Brown's ruling that Lukens was ineligible because he did not file his 1972 Senate race expense account on time.

Lukens can, under law, complete his present term. He has announced his candidacy on the Republican ticket for governor in 1974.

He aiso indicated he might seek a U.S. Senate seat if Sen. William Saxbe, R-Ohio, did not seek reelection.

Lukens did file an expense statement—listing no money received and no money spent—12 days after the deadline, which by law is 45 days after an election.

He said he mailed an earlier statement, which the Butler County Board of Elections said it did not receive.

Lukens was married to a Columbus model Saturday and is now honeymooning in Switzerland.

His attorney, John Zonak, said he will have to confer with Lukens when he returns, but he anticipates further court action, either to the U.S. Supreme Court or to a federal district court.

"I have the utmost respect for the Ohio Supreme Court, but sometimes we don't always see eye to eye," Zonak said, adding that he was not surprised by the decision.

Lukens, a former two-term congressman and a one-time president of the national Young Republicans club, finished second in a three-man GOP gubernatorial primary in 1970.

He is considered by professionals in both parties as an aggressive campaigner.

Lukens, 42, went to the Ohio Supreme Court when Brown, a fellow Republican, refused to accept his candidacy petitions for governor.

The court said Lukens' contention that Ohio law requiring personal expense statements from a candidate

Seek break in logjam on budget

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Conferees on Gov. John J. Gilligan's $9.9 billion budget bill hope to get moving today after three sessions that brought no decisions. "We haven't decided anything," Speaker Pro Tem Vernal G. Riffe Jr., D-89 New Boston, said Wednesday. "We've got to get down to business on this thing."

Riffe's comment came on a busy day that included action on several major bills, including one that would repeal Ohio's Sunday closing laws. The House passed it 62-32 and sent it to the Senate.

Also approved by the House were bills to require razing of gasoline stations abandoned for six months, and to give a five per cent increase to members of the State Teachers Retirement System, School Employes Retirement System, and Public Employes Retirement System. That measure, which had 58 sponsors, received 93-0 approval of the lower chamber.

The Senate voted 31-0 to increase benefits of widows and dependents of members of the State Police and Firemen's Disability and Pension Fund. The boost for widows would be from $130 to $160 a month with the amount for each dependent child going from $45 to $55. Sole survivors would get $150 instead of the present $120.

Also passed by the Senate and sent to the House were measures revising procedures for licensing nursing homes, requiring newspaper notice of sales for the purpose of settling delinquent taxes, and allowing veterinarians to dispose of animals unclaimed after 10 days, provided owners are notified.

The Senate received resolutions providing for the reorganization and administration of state courts and permitting judges below the common pleas level to receive salary increases during their current terms of office.

The House approved a Senate bill permitting the director of the Division of Wildlife to set regulations to protect endangered wildlife species in Ohio. The bill deletes state authority for the payment of bounties except in the case of foxes. The House defeated a proposal clarifying the right of county commissioners to acquire land for airports.

Riffe and Rep. Myrl Shoemaker, D-83 Bourneville, who is chairman of the budget conference committee, accused Republican conferees of "foot dragging" at Tuesday and Wednesday sessions.

Shoemaker, without mentioning names, said he was miffed because some members of the six-member committee came to Tuesday night's session after a dinner that included drinks. He cancelled a Wednesday night meeting. "I'm not going to listen to any more of those martini speeches," he said.

The committee is trying to resolve Senate-House differences in the measure which is needed to run state government for two years starting July 1.

So far, members only have compiled a list of problem areas in proposed spending for education. There has been no formal discussion of about $100 million in cuts made by Republican senators in budget requests by Gilligan's executive departments.

There were reports that in private discussions, an agreement was being talked about that would restore about $20 million of the cuts, with the money coming out of $75 million Republicans earmarked for income tax relief for married taxpayers filing joint returns.

Instead of providing a 10 per cent cut in the income tax bills of joint filers, the reduction would apply only to those in the lower tax brackets.

Claim prison boycott held

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Inmates at the Lebanon Correctional Institution have staged a one-day meal boycott to protest sanitation, food quality and working conditions in the food services area, the Ohio Prisoners Labor Union says.

Prison officials denied Wednesday any knowledge of the incident, which the OPLU said occurred Sunday.

The union said prisoners belonging to the OPLU were placed in the "hole" by prison officials Saturday for encouraging the boycott, which was then in the planning stages.

William Dallman, the prison's superintendent, acknowledged 10 inmates were isolated from other prisoners Friday night. But he said it was only a security measure.

APPOINTED PRINCIPAL — Kenneth W. Amsbary, of 403 N. North St., has been appointed principal of Midway Elementary School in Sedalia. He has taught at the Madison County school for the past eight years and will continue as fifth grade social studies teacher in addition to his administrative duties. Amsbary received his Bachelor of Science degree from Rio Grande College and is currently working toward a master's degree at Xavier University. He is a member of the Washington C.H. violated the state constitution was not supported by his arguments.

In other business the court ruled that the federal Pay Board can't prevent the state from giving pay raises to state employes.

In its decision the court ordered the state to pay full salary to three Ohio State University employes who had been denied pay increases by a Pay Board directive.

The court held that "a federal administrative body lacks jurisdiction to prevent enforcement of otherwise valid state statutes establishing the compensation for classified state employes."

The court also dismissed a suit challenging a Democratic-masterminded legislative reapportionment plan that went into effect in 1971.

The suit was filed by former Rep. Lloyd George Kerns of Richwood, who was represented by Republican party attorney John McElroy, one-time chief aide to former Gov. James A. Rhodes.

The dismissal came under threat of contempt by U.S. District Judge Frank J. Battisti, who upheld the plan and took jurisdiction over the matter.

McElroy said after Battisti's order that he had no alternative but to ask the Supreme Court to dismiss the action. It paves the way for appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Skylab travelers plan for return

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Skylab's astronauts quietly and efficiently put their space station in order today as they prepared to return to earth Friday at the end of a record 28-day mission.

On their last full day in orbit, Charles Conrad Jr., Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz cleaned the house-size laboratory, getting it ready for the Skylab 2 crew that is to visit the station for 56 days starting July 27.

At their request, the astronauts were up an hour early today, at 2 a.m. EDT, to complete the two-day deactivation of the lab. Included was transfer of film, tapes and other experiment equipment into the Apollo ferry ship.

By 6 a.m., before most Americans were up, they were eating lunch and were ahead of schedule.

Later, the capsule communicator was greeted with a cheer when he told the crew the carrier Ticonderoga had practiced an Apollo recovery operation with a simulated landing at a distance of 4½ miles "and the time from splash to hatch open on the deck was 33 minutes."

"Fantastic," Conrad exclaimed. "But we hope to beat 4½ miles."

Scientists eagerly await data from the medical, earth resources, solar astronomy and other experiments, the most extensive ever conducted in space.

At 3:45 a.m. EDT Friday, the astronauts will detach the Apollo from one end of the 118-foot-long lab. After making a fly-around photographic inspection of the station, they'll execute the first of three engine firings that will bring them back to earth.

Splashdown is scheduled for 9:50 a.m. EDT in the Pacific Ocean 830 miles southwest of San Diego, Calif. The main recovery ship, the carrier Ticonderoga, radioed a favorable weather forecast for the landing—partly cloudy skies, 15-knot northeast winds, five-foot seas and a temperature of 67 degrees.

An end to the rain in Ohio except in the southeast and extreme eastern sections was predicted for today by the National Weather Service after showers and a few thunderstorms continued through the night.

Drier air is moving into the northwestern counties, the service said. A slow moving cold front extended Thursday morning from northeast to southwest across central Ohio. This front will move on eastward out of the state today.

Humid warm air ahead of the front is gradually giving way to a drier air mass spreading in from the west.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 60s with warmest areas in the extreme southeast where Ironton reported 71 degrees at dawn.

High temperatures this afternoon are expected to be in the 70s over the northwest and extreme northern sections and in the low to mid 80s elsewhere.

As the cooler air spreads in Friday, high temperatures are expected in the low 80s in the extreme south and in the 70s elsewhere in the state.

Dry weather is expected to continue through the weekend.

Heat blisters Californians

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thundershowers dampened the first day of summer along the Eastern Seaboard today while warm and humid conditions prevailed over most of the other sections of the nation.

A new storm front moved into the Pacific Northwest and scattered rain lingered over the Ohio River Valley.

A thunderstorm Wednesday evening downed trees and power lines in Carthage, Tenn., and dumped 2.7 inches of rain on Pinson, Ala., in just over an hour.

Southern California and the desert region remained unseasonably hot Wednesday for the third day in a row. The mercury hit 106 at Los Angeles, the hottest temperature for that date and the hottest day since Sept. 13, 1971. The National Weather Service said there would be no relief today since the temperature was expected to reach 105 degrees.

The hot weather, coupled with 35-mile-per-hour winds, touched off many forest and brush fires in Southern California. The worst was a 5,000-acre blaze in the San Bernardino National Forest, which threatened Cherry Valley, 60 miles east of Los Angeles.

Temperatures before dawn ranged from 43 at Rawlins, Wyo., to 93 at Needles, Calif.

2 Ohioans being held with cash

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—Two Ohio men found with more than $23,000 in a suitcase were charged Wednesday with carrying a concealed weapon and making a false statement to register a motor vehicle.

Agents of the Internal Revenue Service and Dayton, Ohio police were attempting today to determine where the money, in $1, $5, $10 and $20 bills, came from.

Rodney Elwood Prater, 24, and Jeffrey Lynn Bowshier, 23, both of Lebanon, Ohio, were arrested Tuesday after a jewelry store customer said he saw them "flashing large sums of money."

Police said the two had purchased more than $7,000 worth of diamond jewelry and watches at a local jewelry store and paid $6,000 cash for two motorcycles.

Harvey Sollars, chief of detectives, said the pair had been charged in Ohio with possession of narcotic paraphernalia but have not been tried.

Police also said the two were carrying a .32-caliber automatic pistol and a .38-caliber derringer.

Float cuts dollar down to 75¢

By FRED COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — An American who put aside money 18 months ago to pay for a trip abroad will find each dollar woth only about 75 cents of its former value in Europe today as a result of three devaluations.

He probably heard about the first two devaluations—formal steps announced by the White House and sent to Congress for approval. They reduced the dollar's buying power overseas by 8.58 per cent in December 1971 and by 10 per cent in February 1973.

The third devaluation might be a surprise to the traveler. It was a creeping devaluation, informal and unannounced, and decided in the market place, rather than through negotiations among governments.

Since devaluation No. 2, the dollar has been allowed to float against other important currencies according to supply and demand. Governments no longer were obligated to defend fixed exchange rates.

In some respects, the floating system worked. There were no more world monetary crises.

But the dollar kept floating— more or less steadily downward. Since February, it has lost about 7 per cent in its buying power against an average of leading world currencies, bringing the total shrinkage from the three devaluations to about 25 per cent.

Associated Press correspondents in several European capitals asked bankers, gold dealers, economists and government officials to explain the dollar's weakness since February.

Their answers were remarkably alike on the causes. But proposals for correcting the weakness were far apart.

All those questioned in The AP's survey mentioned Watergate and inflation prominently. They suggested that Watergate would weaken President Nixon's ability to solve U.S. economic problems and that American inflation would erode the value of the dollar.

"I see deeper economic causes in worldwide inflation," said Paul Lichtenberg, spokesman for the executive board of Commerzbank in Frankfurt, Germany. "The Watergate affair was probably only the psychological trigger factor...."

As confidence in the dollar has waned, wealthy individuals, multinational corporations and Middle East oil interests have shifted their assets out of dollars into the relative safety of gold.

"No one can say for certain whether the growing distrust in the dollar set off the run into gold or whether it was gold that undermined confidence in U.S. currency," a Zurich gold dealer said. "It is like asking which came first, the chicken or the egg."

Guido Carli, influential governor of the Bank of Italy, this month suggested either raising the official price of gold or letting government central banks sell gold on the free market. Either move would take pressure off the dollar.

French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing said the United States should support the dollar by resuming dollar purchases on world money markets.

Neither view has attracted much international support.

Economists, officials and bankers also differ on whether floating or fixed exchange rates are preferable.

While the arguing continues, money markets remain uncertain.

At the moment, gold is down from record highs and the dollar is up from record lows. But no one can say for certain what will happen next.

There is nothing to prevent the dollar from floating back up again, if the market decides it was oversold during its long slump. But more Watergate developments damaging to the Nixon administration could depress the dollar further.

Net farm income of $22 billion still predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department, for now at least, is sticking by a new prediction that net farm income this year will exceed $22 billion.

That estimate, despite a threat of fuel shortages and possible reductions in some crop production, would be up from the previous high of $19.2 billion last year.

It also would be about $1 billion more than USDA economists estimated for 1973 net farm income earlier this spring. The main reason for the improved outlook: higher prices of farm commodities.

But economists say privately that the $22 billion estimate is highly qualified and that much depends on how many acres of corn and soybeans, particularly, were actually planted this spring.

It also depends greatly on whether farmers can get sufficient fuel to cultivate and harvest crops this year. Weather, always a factor, could add further doubts.

The department will issue in July a report showing revised acreage plantings for spring crops. Although those will give a better idea of how production might shape up, production estimates based on field conditions will not begin until August for major spring crops.

Meantime, according to the Outlook and Situation Board, here is the official outlook:

"Prices, while remaining strong in the second half of 1973, may ease some from current levels. For the year, both crop and livestock prices may average more than one-fifth higher than in 1972.

"In addition, the volume of crop marketings likely will be up 5 per cent, assuming that record outturns of wheat, corn, and soybeans are achieved."

If this all happens, the USDA expects farmers to sell a record of about $73 billion worth of products this year, compared with $58.5 billion in 1972.

But much of the gain in gross sales will be offset by sharp increases in production expenses, especially for purchased feed, livestock and seed. Prices of almost everything else are up, too, including fuel, fertilizer, machinery, wages and interest rates.

Perleches in the Mouth

Almost all year round I have painful cracks in the corners of my mouth.

I once was told that this might be a vitamin deficiency. I take vitamins and eat an excellent nourishing diet and I know it cannot be because of this.

Miss B.W., R.I.

Dear Miss W.:

These tiny fissures at the angle of the mouth are known as "perleches."

It is true that a deficiency of the vitamin riboflavin can be responsible for this in children and adults. In the absence of such deficiency, other causes must be sought.

Excessive salivation, fungus infections in the corners of the mouth, allergies, and bacterial infections can cause tiny cracks which do not readily heal.

People who wear dentures tend to salivate a great deal and accumulate saliva in the angle of the mouth, causing a constant source of irritation. Children who have a large mass of adenoids and tonsils often salivate until these are removed.

The underlying condition, of course, must be rectified.

There are now a number of excellent ointments and creams that contain antibiotics and cortisone. These can be very effective.

Are there any special foods that should be avoided by people who have a hiatus hernia?

Mr. J.L., Calif.

Dear Mr. L.:

For my readers who are not acquainted with this condition, "hiatus hernia" (or "diaphragmatic hernia") is a weakening in the wall of the esophagus. It occurs at the point where the esophagus joins the stomach.

Vague symptoms of chronic heartburn and bloating may suggest to the doctor that the condition may exist. X-rays of the esophagus can readily demonstrate the presence of this disorder.

Not all cases of hiatus hernia are alike. Therefore, dietary regimes vary.

Generally, overeating, especially fried fatty foods, can be responsible for these distressing symptoms. It is for this reason that physicians urge patients with hiatus hernia to eat smaller quantities of food at more frequent intervals, rather than overload the stomach with one single large meal.

A program of weight reduction, in addition to sensible eating habits, may keep the hernia from progressing.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH — Many people seem to satisfy their consciences when they buy a new car that has elaborate seat belts. It is surprising how quickly this wonderful source of protection is then ignored.

See service cutback due to fund slashes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—David Sweet, director of the Ohio Department of Economic and Community Development outlined Wednesday program cutbacks he said will come if the legislature does not restore a proposed $3.4 million budget cut.

Sweet said the proposed cuts could jeopardize $1.24 million in federal money over the next two years for housing, regional planning, public facilities construction and community development programs.

Opinion And Comment

World citizenship concept

The Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh has given the old concept of world citizenship an intriguing new twist. Though certain misgivings come at once to mind, Father Hesburgh's stature as president of the University of Notre Dame and educator extraordinary lend weight to the idea he advances.

Certainly his central thesis in a speech at Harvard University rings a true note. If people scattered about the globe perceived themselves as being both national and world citizens, this might indeed tend to break down the national sovereignty which he considers "the one great remaining divider of mankind."

But many advocates of universal brotherhood may hesitate to accept Father Hesburgh's idea of setting up an international agency to grant world citizenship on the basis of commitment to world peace and justice.

One wonders how the determination would be made, and whether this might lead to a kind of elitism.

The basic idea is good. We suggest that it needs further refining.

WASHINGTON CALLING . . . by Marquis Childs

Jackson prepares path to White House

WASHINGTON — When a trend happens to coincide with the ambitions of a man with his eyes on the presidency the odds in the great game of politics are narrowed. The trend is toward a new isolationism.

Sen. Henry M. (Scoop) Jackson is exploiting the nation's discontents with a shrewd appeal to reject the blandishments of the Nixon foreign policy initiatives.

The state visit of Leonid I. Brezhnev, returning the Nixon mission to Moscow of a year ago, is for Jackson a golden opportunity. What he is saying has a familiar ring, recalling the dire warning of those who inveighed against American involvement in world affairs prior to World War II. Scheming foreigners would surely take Uncle Sam to the cleaners.

Jackson opposed the SALT I agreement signed in Moscow by the President and Brezhnev. That agreement, limiting defense ballistic missiles and with a five-year limit on deployment of offensive missiles pending the outcome of SALT II, was arrived at after lengthy negotiation.

The American delegation was led by specialists thoroughly versed in the intricacies of nuclear weaponry. The agreement had at least the tacit sanction of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

SOUNDING the alarm in the Senate, Jackson succeeded in putting over a resolution calling for numerical parity in any future agreement. This was the numbers game that conveniently ignored the over-all factors of nuclear strength as shown in the deployment of the multiple warhead on American missiles.

In his appearance on the "Face the Nation" television program Jackson carried this a step further. Since the President has been so weakened by the Watergate scandal, he suggested, anything that might be agreed to during the current visit is likely to be invalid.

That is one way to build a hedge against approval of whatever may come out of the lagging SALT — talks.

Blocking most-favored nation status in trade with the Soviet Union, Jackson noted with pride that 77 of his Senate colleagues were signed up with him. MFN, providing trading partners, is essential if MOSCOW and Washington are to expand trade, with Moscow buying computers and the other advanced equipment urgently needed.

It is the key to the series of agreements covering a variety of exchanges in science, medicine, the arts. That Brezhnev has staked his standing in the Politburo on tangible results from the growing relationship is a fairly safe deduction. The hardliners are said to be ready to prove the danger to Soviet security in relaxation with the West.

THE DEMAND Jackson is making that Moscow release the 100,000 or more Russian Jews who want to emigrate to Israel touches a deep emotional response. The hardships worked on Jews who ask to leave for Israel are one more evidence of the cruelties of a totalitarian system.

But what Jackson demands is far broader in scope. When he talks about the right of all persons to emigrate and then to return if they desire, he is calling for a complete change in the Soviet system.

However desirable that may be, it is beyond the power of one sovereign state to bring about a revolution in another sovereign state.

If we are not to do business with the Soviet Union, how are we to justify extensive aid to the dictatorship of the Greek colonels? Jackson's response is to say that he opposed military help for the colonels.

Or what about the repressive military dictatorship in Brazil? In a world of evil choices the United States cannot opt for purity in splendid isolation.

THE JACKSON appeal seems likely to take hold, in the opinion of this observer. The disillusion with government and politics in general growing out of the Watergate mess, the failure of America's allies in Europe to carry a fair share of the defense burden, the decline of the dollar, the inroads in inflation — these and a host of other reasons threaten to turn off the average citizen from the responsibilities of America's position in the world.

On the other hand, the immense weight of that position may in itself counter a retreat toward America's shores.

In Jackson's own state of Washington Boeing is selling ten 707s to the People's Republic of China. The market for America's advanced technology must expand beyond these shores.

THESE DAYS . . . by John Chamberlain

We could have had an energy policy

Everything connected with energy seems to be going wrong these days.

We have gas shortages and voltage cutbacks. A container ship, the Sea Witch, plows into a small oil tanker, the Esso Brussels, in the Narrows leading to New York harbor, killing several crew members in a flaming, oil-filled sea.

The Naderites demand instantaneously clean automobile engines, with complete indifference to the difficulties involved in getting both the carbon monoxide and the oxides of nitrogen out of the exhaust at one and the same time.

The anti-pollutionists and the conservationists seem eternally to be working at cross-purposes: the newer automobiles, with better emission control, get only 8 to 10 miles to a gallon of gas, which means that the Nader "improvements" will require an 11 per cent increase in total fuel consumption. The circle thus goes back to the dangers of collision as more tankers move into our ports with more crude oil destined for our overworked refineries.

It could all have been avoided.

Ten years ago, as I remember, I took a trip through the Appalachian coal country with Joe Moody, who was head of the National Coal Policy Conference. He kept talking about the need for a national energy policy, which would have resulted in some positive thinking about a blend of coal, hydroelectricity, oil, natural gas and atomic power use.

True, he put his main accent on coal, which led critics to say he was flacking for his own industry. But Joe Moody's interests were wider than that: he urged the need of a composite energy policy on both Richard Nixon and John Kennedy in the 1960 election campaign. Nothing came of it.

SO NOW we have the chickens coming home to roost.

The ridiculous thing about it is that our politicians have been scared witless by the shortsighted claims of the environmentalists. New Jersey politicos, fearful of polluted beaches, are categorically against setting up a deepwater single-point mooring installation off Sandy Hook that could accommodate the new 250,000 - or 300,000 - ton tankers.

Their fears are misplaced: a single big tanker pumping its cargo into an undersea pipeline for direct transmission to refineries in the northern New Jersey and Philadelphia regions would be a much safer proposition than four or five 75,000 ton tankers crowding into the Delaware River or New York harbor.

The U.S., up to 10 years ago, was the world's leader in the technological revolution. But today it seems incapable of learning anything new. Meanwhile, the foreigners have taken over.

The British, the Mediterranean countries, the Nigerians, the South Africans, the Japanese, the South Americans and the Indonesians have no aversion to deep-water loading and unloading of oil. By idiotic contract there isn't a single-deep-water oil terminal in the whole United States.

The State of Maine voted "no" on a proposition to bring big tankers into a deep harbor at Machiasport. The Big Stone Beach deepwater terminal site in Delaware was prohibited by Delaware's Coastal Zoning Act of 1971.

BUT JUST WHAT is it that the environmentalists fear?

Britain's Milford Haven oil terminal is located in a national park, and the Gulf Oil Co. Bantry Bay facilities in Ireland are set down in a region that remains attractive to tourists. At Rotterdam, in Holland, recreational beaches have been built with the sand dredged from the deepwater channels required by tankers.

Economic and environmental needs can be combined, but Americans, with their compartmented minds and emotional approach to problems, don't seem capable of learning from the British, the Irish or the Dutch.

The crazy thing about it is that we often react before we know what we are talking about. When offshore drilling for oil in the New England coastal region was first mentioned, Gov Tommy Meskill of Connecticut was among those to condemn the very idea. His constituents had visions of seeing oil wells in Long Island Sound.

They hadn't listened to the geologists, who might have reassured them that any prospective well would be at least 30 miles over the horizon on the farther side of Long Island. And they might have taken heart from the British and the Norwegians, who will be getting North Sea oil from pipelines leading from tanks situated out of sight on the ocean floor.

TO GIVE Gov. Meskill due credit, he has relaxed his original stand against offshore oil drilling. He told his fellow politicos at the recent Nevada governors' conference that energy needs must be considered along with ecological demands, which put him up alongside New Hampshire's progressive Gov. Meldrim Thomson Jr., who wants a refinery, deepwater unloading facilities, atomic energy plants and all that.

New England is worried about its lobster catch. Well, the shrimp catch in the Gulf of Mexico has been improved by the presence of offshore oil rigs, which seem to attract marine life. For all anyone knows, an offshore oil industry in New England might improve things for the local fishermen.

Man garners dirty jokes

By JOHN VINOCUR
Associated Press Writer

NICE, France (AP) — There's something distinctly unfunny abut a man who has filed away over 60,000 dirty jokes.

Gershon Legman admits it himself: for someone who doesn't mind being called the world's greatest authority on erotic humor, he's not a very ha-ha guy.

Legman has an archivist's heart that makes his telling of a filthy story turn into something like an ornithologist's sighting report.

"I heard this one first in central Tennessee..." he'll say, and then fill in an historical-psychological analysis of the story before absent-mindedly tossing away the punchline.

He began research in 1938 for the first volume of a book, "The Rationale of the Dirty Joke."

Until he stopped to spend more time on folk songs and limericks, Legman, of Scranton, Pa., went around talking to people about anything long enough until he could lay his standard question on them: "What is the dirtiest joke you've ever heard?" The answer was normally fed into the Legman filing system with scholarly rigor.

Legman, though an American, has lived in the south of France for about 25 years with much of time going into his great compilation, which has been published in about 10 languages.

What he has perceived is that American dirty stories often have racial or homosexual themes. The Germans and Dutch are scatological, he says, and the basic French motifs deal with adultery and impotence. Whatever the subject, he says, British jokes are essentially aggressive and full of one-upmanship.

Legman's theory on why people tell dirty jokes is that they are an outlet for hostility and anxiety.

"The teller is often forcing his jokes on his audience, and passing his fears on to them. When you laugh, he's reassured. Tell me your favorite story and I'll tell you something about your sex life."

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Dear Abby:

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

New pool owners are flooded with friends

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are installing a swimming pool, and already everyone we know is asking if they can come over and use it when it's finished. We are not rich. We both work and are paying for this pool with our hard-earned money.

If we wanted to swim with a bunch of people, we'd go to a public pool. We are putting in our own because we want our privacy.

How do we tell these people that we aren't looking for company after our pool is completed? Or worse yet, what to say to the neighbors when they come knocking at our door in their swimsuits?

HIS AND HERS

DEAR H AND H: People with pools must have rules, but there's no point in alienating everyone before your pool is finished. Wait until it's ready for use, and alienate them one by one.

DEAR ABBY: Women are getting so nervy now with the Women's Lib thing, they are asking men to dance.

I had a harrowing experience the other night when my wife and I were at a public dance hall. She left me to go to the powder room, and you wouldn't believe the number of klutzes who moved in on me, asking me to dance with them. I am 68, bald and no bargain, but that didn't seem to make any difference.

Next time I'll go to the powder room with my wife. Phooey on equal rights!

BALDY

DEAR BALDY: Don't "phooey" so fast. Why shouldn't women be able to ask men to dance? Some men would be delighted. And those who aren't can always say no.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are legally separated, and I am expecting next month. The doctor says it will be twins. (I already have one child.)

I want to send out birth announcements. Is this proper under the circumstances? If it is, should I write in my name only where it says, "Parents" on the announcement? Or should I include his too?

I hadn't even thought it might not be proper until my family raised the question. They all have different opinions.

EXPECTING TWINS

DEAR EXPECTING: Under the circumstances, forego the printed announcements. Write a personal note to your close friends to inform them of the double-header.

DEAR ABBY: I am still chafing over the doctor who wrote that he resents his parents for allowing him to be circumsiged as an infant.

Point one: What mature person would harbor such resentment for a temporary discomfort that he can't even remember? And point two: If he knew his business, he would know that cervical cancer among women whose husbands are circumcized is far less frequent than among the others.

RURAL AMERICA IN THE MIST — If you have real artistic appreciation you can find beauty anywhere. This old barn, framed in the wan light of a misty June morning, appealed to a Record-Herald photographer. Not everyone would see it as a picture subject, but it will bring back memories to those who have their roots in the soil.

TV Viewing

NEW YORK (AP) — They're having a cage tilt this week, as they say in basketball circles. What makes it a bit different is that it's in mainland China and being videotaped by a U.S. firm.

The company is the New York-based TVS Televison Network, which says it'll show the first of eight scheduled SinoAmerican basketball games next Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. EDT on an estimated 125 U.S. stations.

It's the first such sports event—aside from those held during President Nixon's trip to mainland China—covered by an American TV company since NBC filmed the now-famous table tennis matches between U.S. and Chinese teams in April 1971.

The basketball battles are between a 12-man team of U.S. collegiate stars and the Chinese national men's team. A woman's championship team from John F. Kennedy College in Wahoo, Neb., also is on the tour and will compete against China's national women's team.

The TVS network, which got permission from the government of mainland China to tape the first game for showing in the United States, has specialized in covering U.S. collegiate sports since the mid-1960s.

TVS Vice President Alan Lubell said his company will go to Moscow to cover the World University Games which run Aug. 15-25. Often called the "collegiate Olympics," the games, involving U.S. college athletes, will include basketball, fencing, gymnastics and wrestling, among other sports.

Lubell said there'll be about a total of 10 hours of Moscow games that TVS teams will transmit for prime-time broadcasting on about 175 U.S. stations between Aug. 15 and 26. Most of it will be shown on the weekends.

He said TVS initially wanted to broadcast live-via-satellite coverage of the basketball matches in mainland China, but the Chinese government vetoed the idea for reasons they didn't fully explain.

Miss Lavi, 30, and yacht builder Peter Rittmaster, 32, of Key Biscayne, Fla., were married in a six-minute ceremony under a worn red canopy on the lawn of the community hall. It was her third marriage and the first for Rittmaster.

Queen Elizabeth II attends Ascot races

ASCOT, England (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II led the annual parade of high society and high fashion to the Ascot races.

A surprise shower, the first after an uncommon 18 days of sunshine in England, started Tuesday just after the queen emerged from Windsor Castle to drive in a horse-drawn carriage to the racetrack.

Miss Reeves is June bride of William Royster Jr.

First Christian Church was a pretty setting for the marriage of Miss Cheryl Lynn Reeves, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Reeves, 714 Sycamore St., and William E. Royster Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Royster Sr., Rt. 1, New Holland.

The double-ring ceremony was performed at 2:30 p.m. June 10 by the Rev. Don Baker, before an altar enhanced with candelabra, trimmed in white satin bows and vases of white gladiola, white and blue daisies. The pews were marked with white satin bows. Miss Elaine Stookey presented a prelude of wedding music, with Alan Dunlap as vocalist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white eyelet A-line gown, styled with jewel neckline, empire waist and trimmed in powder blue and lace, with long scalloped fitted sleeves. It was made by the bride and a college friend, Mrs. Dennis Maggied. Her veil was elbow-length with fitted headpiece of white embroidered daisies and seed pearls. The train was trimmed in daisies and lace.

She carried a cascade of white daisies, white miniature carnations and white sweetheart roses, with babies breath and ivy, centered with a white and blue daisy corsage with streamers. Following the ceremony the bride presented both mothers with a long-stemmed white rose from her bouquet.

Miss Gloria Kushner, of Cleveland, college roommate of the bride, was maid of honor. Her floor-length gown of flocked powder blue voile, with sweetheart skirt, had short puffy sleeves, an empire waist and contrasting long satin bows. She wore a white garden hat trimmed in blue.

Mrs. Thom Coe, friend of the bride, was bridesmaid. Her dress was identical to that of the maid of honor, in mint green. She also wore a garden hat, trimmed in green. Both carried white nylon baskets filled with co-ordinating daisies and white miniature carnations, tied with blue and green streamers.

William Markle of Columbus, served as best man and Tim Royster served as groomsman for his brother. Seating the wedding guests were Mike and Steve Reeves, brothers of the bride.

The bride's mother chose a turquoise crepe street-length dress with long, sheer sleeves, accented with rhinestones. She had white accessories and her corsage was white daisies and pink sweetheart roses, with baby breath.

Mrs. Royster wore a light blue street-length dress of jersey knit, with long sleeves. She wore white accessories and had a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses and white daisies.

The grandmothers wore corsages of blue daisies and white miniature carnations.

MRS. WILLIAM ROYSTER JR.

Hostesses for the reception, in the church social room, were Mrs. James Teeters, Mrs. Roger Spahr and Mrs. Maggied. The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake, topped with a floral arrangement of white and blue daisies and white and yellow sweetheart roses, and had cascades of blue daisies gracing the tiers. Miss Roseann Royster, sister of the groom, presided at the guest book.

The new Mrs. Royster, a 1970 graduate of Washington Senior High School, will begin her senior year at Ohio State University, majoring in Social Work. Her husband, a 1969 graduate of Miami Trace High School, attended Columbus Business University and is now employed as an assistant foreman at Worthington Industries, in Columbus.

For the wedding trip, the bride wore a powder blue pantsuit. They are now living at 5478 Rockingham Court, Westerville.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at a dinner at The Sulky Restaurant, following the rehearsal Saturday evening.

Craig family concentrates in Bloomingburg

Mrs. B.A. Krantz, of Hyderabad, India, is in the last few weeks of a visit with her mother, Mrs. M.G. Morris and her sister, Mrs. Harry Craig and Mr. Craig, in Bloomingburg. She will rejoin Dr. Krantz in Hyderabad in July.

Dr. Krantz, who has spent considerable time in India in the past several years, first for the Rockefeller Foundation, then for the Ford Foundation, is presently assisting in the International Institute of Crop Research for the Semi-arid Tropics. He visited in Ohio earlier in the spring.

Other members of the Craig family visiting in the Morris-Craig home recently included Mrs. Gerald Ervin, of Tucson, Ariz., Mrs. Frank Taylor and son, Charles, of DeKalb, Ill., Dr. and Mrs. Paul Droste and children, of Columbus, Ken Krantz, of the College of Wooster, in Wooster, and Bob Krantz, of Muskingum College, New Concord, both sons of Dr. and Mrs. Krantz, and David and Richard Craig, sons of the Harry Craigs.

David left today for a sports-oriented camp near Zurich, Switzerland, where he will be head counselor. It is an international project, with participants from many countries.

Mrs. Ervin, the former Alice Craig, and her husband will leave the end of the month for Mexico to attend the University of Guadalajara, concentrating on the study of Spanish. This fall, Mr. Ervin will begin work at Ohio State University on his Ph. D, and will teach in a Columbus school.

But for a few days, much of the Craig family activity was centered in Bloomingburg.

AMERICAN FAMILY PLANNING

Olla Podrida sees India via slides

Olla Podrida Club, meeting Monday for a dessert course at Anderson's Restaurant, enjoyed an especial treat in the form of a taste of India, via the slide presentation and narration of Mrs. B.A. (Nellie) Krantz, daughter of Mrs. Mina Morris, who was hostess.

The dessert course was served at tables centered with planters, featuring yellow flowers, as Mrs. Nona Stevens, president, welcomed the guests, including Mrs. Krantz, Mrs. Robert Garringer, Mrs. John Sagar Sr., Mrs. Carrie Stephenson, Mrs. Virginia Whiteside and Mrs. Alice Cory.

In a brief business session, Mrs. Walter Parrett gave the usual reports, said that Mrs. Dorothia Slager asked that her name be withdrawn from membership and told the group that the club will dispense with meetings in July and August.

Mrs. Krantz, whose husband is an agricultural research scientist, with the Crop Research Institute, in Hyderabad, India—a thousand miles south of New Delhi — showed pictures depicting the Indian way of life, in a country one-third the size of the United States, but with a population of 507 million people, that population increasing at the rate of a million a month.

Despite the extremely over-crowded conditions, Mrs. Krantz had pictures of many beauty spots in India and discussed the agricultural problems - and the progress made - in the semi-arid country. Her interesting presentation left club members and guests with a better understanding of a country which seems remote, indeed, in Washington C.H.

Club members participating in the informative afternoon included Mrs. Elton Elliott, Mrs. Anna Groff, Mrs. Zoa Garringer, Mrs. Dean Powell, Mrs. Willard Bitzer, Mrs. Parrett, Mrs. Harry Bell, Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. Morris.

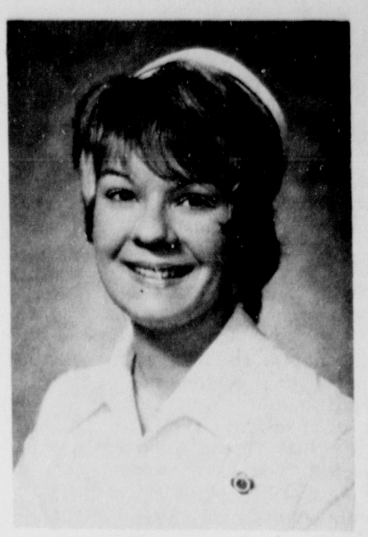

Guest night held

A dessert smorgasbord and a 'fun' style show featured the Christian Women's Fellowship of First Christian Church, meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. Mrs. Orpha Willis conducted the short business meeting.

Fifty members and guests enjoyed the pretty decorations in the church dining room, with vases of colorful flowers and clever nut-cup "wheelbarrows", made by Mrs. Lloyd Sowders, which were individual favors to take home.

The program, conceived by Mrs. Carl Meriwether, was in the form of a comical style show, narrated by Mrs. Harold Callendar. Models were Miss Janet Vance, Mrs. Beryl Raypole, Mrs. Robert Maust, Mrs. Robert Stackhouse, Mrs. David Lee Williams, Miss Becky Callendar, Mrs. Walter Parsley, Mrs. Tom Parsley, Mrs. Harold Fields and Mrs. Dave Lucas.

The hostess committee, who prepared the smorgasbord, was composed of Mrs. Ward Brown, Miss Jane Meriwether, Mrs. Hazel McNorton, Mrs. Milbourne Flee, Mrs. Charles Sheridan, Mrs. Caroline Haggard, Mrs. Allen Sells, Mrs. Mac Dews and Mrs. Forest Haines.

GRADUATES — Miss Mary Ann Hopkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice B. Hopkins, 660 Warren Ave., will graduate Friday from Riverside Methodist School of Nursing. The ceremonies will be held at Battelle Institute at 8 p.m. Following graduation, Miss Hopkins will join a surgical unit on 4-south at Riverside Methodist. She graduated from Washington High School in 1970.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FRIDAY, JUNE 22

ARIES
(March 21 to April 20)

Keep plugging, as the hard-hitting person puts it. This is the type of day that will require "digging in," making use of your fine stamina.

TAURUS
(April 21 to May 21)

The "little" errors could trip most, so be alert. You have no opponents so strong that they can't be handled with gentle persuasion and good intent.

GEMINI
(May 22 to June 21)

Poise and perseverance needed. As with those born under many other Signs, you also could encounter unexpected, and unusual, situations.

CANCER
(June 22 to July 23)

Present influences indicate some obstacles — not insurmountable, but annoying unless you retain your sense of humor — AND patience.

LEO
(July 24 to Aug. 23)

You have an exceptionally good planetary set-up now but must toe the line, nevertheless, to avoid friction with those who are not in so comfortable a spot.

VIRGO
(Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)

Caution should be day's keynote. Don't create unnecessary dilemmas through impulsiveness, and take no reckless chances.

LIBRA
(Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)

Take care in counselling others, imparting information. Avoid arguments as such, but discuss calmly important trends, transactions.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)

Discretion should be your watchword. Keep disposition even in order to cope with the ruffled ones you meet — and there may be several.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)

A period for some introspection. Through reflection, you will get a clearer view of the road ahead, to make plans for further accomplishment and satisfaction.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)

Direct your innate enthusiasm into progressive channels. You can accomplish more than many others now. Expecially favored: written matters and travel plans.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)

Going it alone will not be the answer now. There are definite areas where you will have to associate with, plan with, others. Teamwork!

PISCES
(Feb. 20 to March 20)

Some plans may have to be changed whether you like it or not. Be composed, however, for you may well profit by the change. Keep your sense of humor sharp.

YOU BORN TODAY are a Gemini-Cancer cuspal and, as such, are endowed with the strongest traits of both Signs. You have the fine intellect, imagination and versatility of the Geminian plus the practicality, conservatism and meticulousness of the Cancerian — a potent combination. But you often lack confidence in yourself; become easily discouraged. Your love of home and family is outstanding, but you may be too strict a parent or spouse. You would make an excellent teacher but, here again, you will have to guard against being too stern a disciplinarian. Other lines in which you could excel: writing, music, medicine, the theater.

Book on price freeze proves best-seller

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the hottest selling items at the Government Printing Office is a special book on President Nixon's 60-day price freeze.

For 90 cents, the book, entitled "Freeze and Phase 4" can be obtained by mail. At a government book store, it goes for 65 cents.

In London, which had no rain for more than two weeks, an electrical storm flooded roads and brought traffic to a halt. One man was struck by lightning and hospitalized with serious burns.

Industry eyes gas reserves

By TERESA C. PITTS
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Some major industries are trying to help themselves to Ohio natural gas reserves to circumvent a national fuel shortage.

The state Public Utilities Commission is considering at least two requests to tap eastern Ohio natural gas deposits on behalf of manufacturers.

Columbia Gas of Ohio, at Zanesville, has asked that Ford Motor Co. be allowed to use public pipelines to transport natural gas from recently acquired fields in Morgan County to its Avon Lake facility.

Ford promises to pay with gas for use of the pipeline. Any gas the Avon Lake plant couldn't use would be returned to Columbia for distribution to its local customers.

Ford also would underwrite half of the $450,000 it will cost Columbia to install pipes and other facilities to serve the Avon plant.

Ford wants to use the gas to fire ovens to dry paint on the bodies of Econoline Vans. Avon Lake is about 150 miles from the 20,000-acre Ford gas field in Morgan County.

A Cleveland firm, Micro Mineral Development Inc., has asked for basically the same set-up on behalf of northern and eastern Ohio industries.

Micro Mineral, which would utilize Eastern Ohio Gas Co. facilities, requests natural gas exploration authority for five years on an "emergency basis" to help industry through the fuel shortage.

Corporation President Leonard Gardner said "hundreds" of Ohio manufacturers had signed letters of intent to support the company if the PUCO grants the request.

There is some fear a favorable ruling on behalf of either request could trigger a stampede by big industrial companies to tie up Ohio's natural gas reserves, denying them to companies that are the only source of gas for residential and small commercial customers.

PUCO turned down a similar request last year from the Marion Brick Co.

But Gardner claims public gas sources would only be helped by such an arrangement.

"We could increase pipeline supplies by 15 to 20 per cent just in paying for pipeline use," he said.

Ohio's natural gas fields are located in the eastern half of the state. Gardner estimated that "with economical use" Ohio had enough gas to last 25 to 30 more years.

Conservative investing pays for founder of mutual fund

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK AP) — T. Rowe Price of Baltimore knows how to make money in the stock market. For each $100 he invested in 1934 he has a "total investment accomplishment" of $8,274.20, made up of both income and market appreciation.

This is no "on paper" dream such as is indulged in by timid people. It is in paper, the kind you and I use to buy things we need. It is real and it has been accomplished through conservative, long-term investing rather than trading.

The sum is really quite modest compared to what could have been. Price earned liberal income from his investments, some $1,225.74 for each $100 invested. Had he reinvested those dividends each $100 would have grown to $27,120.11.

Many investors will recognize Price as the man who founded some of the most successful mutual funds in recent years, a man who was described this week by Michael Lipper, a fund analyst, as "more right than almost anyone else for a long time."

But what Price did with his funds, from which he is now retired at 75, was nothing but what he was doing with his own family portfolios. "We'd cry together and we'd be happy together," he said in an interview.

Price's success began after 10 years experience in investments when, he said, he learned "I did not have the ability to correctly forecast the trends in the stock market."

This led him to concentrate on shares of "those companies which were still growing in size and profitability and stay with them for as long as they were operating in fertile fields and benefiting from capable management."

That was the beginning of his "Growth Stock Theory of Investment," which he practices successfully to this day, still insisting "it is not necessary to guess the stock market trends to be a successful investor."

The amateur, he states, "can be successful without benefit of experience and research," if he recognizes some basic market factors, of which these three seem as pertinent as any:

1. Most corporations, like people, pass through a life cycle of growth, maturity and decline."

Once a business is well established, he argues, "the greatest opportunity for gain is afforded during the early stages of growth in earnings per share. The risk factor increases after maturity is reached and decline begins."

2. "Earnings growth per share is the most important factor determining what a share in a business is worth."

3. "Change is the investor's only certainty." Change in social, political and economic trends, and changes in industry and company life cycles, requires changes in portfolios.

Price would sell some of his one-time growth stocks if it weren't for the large capital gains taxes he would have to pay. The companies, generally considered blue chips, are mature, beyond their growth stage.

Today's climate of inflation, "socialization of basic industries," mounting welfare costs and overpricing of some growth stocks has caused him to shift the industries he picks.

Prominent in his 1937 portfolios were automotive, building, chemical, electric equiping, public utilities, and miningsmelting stocks. Today he has added cosmetics, food and beverage, and pharmaceutical and health, all consumer industries, eliminating autos and building, and reducing chemical, metal and public utility stocks. He also owns considerable gold stock.

He is greatly concerned about world affairs, particularly the absence of an international monetary system and the acceptance of inflation. He feels that continued prosperity is unlikely without returning to goldbased currencies.

Price's views and a detailed record are included in a new, privately printed booklet "for friends and a few people in the financial world," called "A Successful Investment Philosophy Based on the Growth Stock Theory of Investing."

Asked why it was written he replied: "It had been my ambition for a long time to convince investors you don't have to know a lot about the stock market to make money."

Driveways have play dangers, AAA official warns

Safer than streets, home driveways are not always free of traffic danger for small children who seem to have no fear, warns Mrs. Fred Shoop, secretary-manager of the Fayette County Automobile Club.

It is estimated that several hundred children are killed and thousands injured each year while innocently playing in home driveways, says the AAA official. Strangely enough, the victims, generally under 5 years of age, are often struck by a car driven by one of their parents.

"These tragedies can be cut significantly with some added thought and caution by drivers and instruction by parents to children regarding the dangers of playing in a driveway," added the auto club spokesman.

When there is any chance of children in the area, Mrs. Shope urges that motorists circle their vehicles and check under them before entering. "Since most driveway mishaps occur when the vehicle is being backed, drivers should take the time to check again before starting, then keep a sharp eye until the movement is completed."

The AAA official also warns against parking in a garage or driveway without setting the parking brake and gear. She suggests locking the vehicle if there is any chance children may tamper with it and cause it to roll out of control.

The Cuyahoga River in Ohio became so polluted from oil and debris discharged in factory areas that it actually caught fire. The burning river damaged two railroad bridges.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

When I first saw Dr. Ricardo Tuazon's color photographs, it was at a great disadvantage but I admired them from a distance and planned to return for a closer look.

I was in a wheelchair being taken down a hospital corridor to the X-ray department when we passed an open office on whose walls a display of pictures was visible. At my request, the aide paused long enough for me to see that they were excellent photographs and to note the doctor's name on the door.

"It's like a photo gallery," the aide said. "Word gets around the hospital staffers drop in to have a look."

Some day later, when I recovered sufficiently to walk around, I headed down the hall to Dr. Tuazon's office. The door was open, no one was in . . . but the picture display encouraged inspection.

ABOUT 25 photos hung on three walls — beautiful color prints of scenics, sunsets, swans and flower closeups. Though the prints varied in subject matter, all of them were mounted similarly in a way that was distinctive and individualistic.

Each color photo was mounted flush to the edges of a one-inch-deep border frame. Most of the frames were rectangular but some were oval and a couple were circular. Most of the one-inch border frames were painted black but a few were painted in a color to harmonize with its color print.

Dr. Tuazon came in and smiled pleasantly as I expressed my interest in his photography. He was accustomed to strangers popping in to view his pictures.

"They've all been taken during my vacation travels," he explained, " . . . selections from trips to Europe, Hawaii and national parks in this country. There are so many impressive sights to see and I try to bring back some of the scenes and color. It's an added pleasure to find later that the pictures are enjoyed by others."

"WHAT ABOUT the way these pictures are mounted?" I asked.

"I didn't care for the usual type of photo frames," he replied. "I made these myself and each size, shape and color suits the particular photo on it. The one-inch border edges makes them stand out from the wall and the entire display becomes unified. However, each photo is an individual picture that can be appreciated without any distraction from an outlining frame."

Because so many viewers asked how the frames were made, Dr. Tuazon decided to save his time and theirs. He itemized the materials needed and procedure to be followed, mineographed the list and has it ready for questions. Here are the items and technique he uses:

MATERIALS AND TOOLS: Tempered masonite ½ inch . . . Wood strips (mahogany preferred) 1 inch x 1 inch . . . Contact wood cement (U.S. Plywood preferred, Weldwood) . . . Elmco White Glue (Franklin Glue Co.) . . . Tuffilm Spray (Grumbacher's) . . . C-clamps, 3 to 5 inch . . . Hand plane . . . Rolling pin or rubber print roller . . . Brush, 2 inches wide . . . Sandpaper, extra fine . . . Spray paint.

PROCEDURE:

1. Spray prints with Tuffilm.
2. Cut masonite to size — ¼ inch less than all 4 sides of print.
3. Cut and miter wood strips to size of masonite.
4. Glue wood strips to masonite with contact cement and clamp tight at four corners. Leave to dry overnight.
5. Plane edges of frame. Mask top of frame and spray-paint wood strips.
6. Sandpaper lightly top of frame.
7. Apply Elmco glue lightly and spread with brush. Wait a few minutes until glue is tacky.
8. Lay photograph from one edge and smooth out surface carefully with print roller of rolling pin.
9. Clamp or press print to frame for eight hours or overnight.
10. Trim print overlap with razor blade flush to side of frame.
11. Bevel edges with hand plane or sandpaper.
12. Spray wood border edges and face of photograph with Tuffilm or clear plastic spray.

AFTER THANKING Dr. Tuazon for this photo grame prescription for myself and this column's readers, I wanted to know a bit more about him.

He had studied medicine in his native Philippines and had come to the United States about 15 years ago. For the past 10 years, Dr. Tuazon has been a pathologist at Booth Memorial Hospital in Flushing, N.Y., specializing in taking and analyzing microscope slide pictures for medical diagnoses.

His hobby of photography also began about 10 years ago starting with an inexpensive mail order camera. He now carries a Nikon and Nikkormat camera on his travels and is especially fond of a macro lens for closeups.

He's ready to prescribe photography as good medicine for anyone wishing to preserve memories of places he's been to, and the good times he has had. It sounds like a universal prescription.

Costly gifts exchanged by leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The current summit talks have included an exchange of lavish gifts, with the White House explaining its gifts were donated by American firms.

Soviet Communist leader Leonid I. Brezhnev brought with him an antique silver Russian samovar, a silver-gilt water pitcher and a dozen stemmed goblets on a large tray, and a large Bokhara design rug for President Nixon.

For Mrs. Nixon there was a Russian china tea service for 12, a coffee service for 12, a half-dozen blue and white enameled silver-gilt tea glass holders and cut glass tea glasses, a white wool crocheted shawl and a malachite and bronze jewel box.

Nixon has given Brezhnev a $1,000 Lincoln Continental town car and a large supply of spare parts, which a spokesman said were provided by Ford Motor Co. for a "nominal fee."

The same was done by General Motors for the black Cadillac that Nixon gave Brezhnev last year, the spokesman said.

The White House also disclosed that the $12,000 Petersen rifle given by Nixon to Brezhnev was donated by its maker, as was a $5,000 Cybis porcelain grouping.

Have you been had? There's a remedy!

'Bill of Rights" protects consumers

By TERESA C. PITTS
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The hard-sell salesman tells you that an advertised special you wanted to buy isn't good quality. He sells you another item that costs more.

You have been duped.

But you can do something about it, report officials of the Ohio Department of Commerce. Since June 5, Ohio consumers have been protected by 11 new rights when they buy a product or a service.

This bill of consumer rights comes under the Ohio Consumer Sales Practices Act approved in 1972 by the 109th General Assembly. The act set up the consumer protection division of the commerce department and authorized it to write rules and regulations that would have the force of law.

The rules, written after lengthy public hearings, became effective June 5.

One of the rights specifically guards consumers against stores that lure customers by offering a bargain only to switch them to a higher-priced item.

"These bait-and switchers can and should be prosecuted," said a commerce department spokesman.

Bait-and-switch is one of more than 800 known consumer frauds and gyps in operation in Ohio.

Then there is the case of advertising showing a "roomful of furniture for $399." A disappointed furniture buyer discovers the "roomful" includes only a sofa and chair.

A second consumer "right" says that items displayed, but not included in an advertised price, must be clearly identified.

Small print is off-limits, too. All exclusions or limitations must be in a print size at least half as large as the main display type.

A newspaper ad offers a free record. Closer inspection reveals you also must buy the stereo.

Such advertisements are illegal, said commerce officials. No offer can legally be called a "bonus" or "gift" or "free" if it:

—requires that you buy another, more expensive item.

—is continuous or repeated over a long time.

—does not clearly state any terms, conditions or obligations on which it depends.

—requires that you purchase a low-quality item.

The "rights" also shield consumers from disreputable servicemen or repairmen.

If you have a washing machine repaired, the serviceman must give you a written estimate of repairs costing $25 or more; obtain authorization for additional costs of 10 per cent or more; and tell you if used parts will be returned.

Also, repairmen can not charge for unauthorized services, indicate repairs are necessary when they are not, tell you certain repairs have been made when they have not, or refuse a request for a written and itemized receipt.

A cartoon depicts a salesman showing a prospective buyer one side of an automobile, while someone is painting over the words "police" or "taxi" on the opposite side.

Selling used items as "new" is one of the biggest and most disreputable sales practices, one consumer protection spokesman said.

Under consumer protection regulations, you have legal recourse anytime a salesperson tells you an item is new or unused if it is not, or misleads you about extent of previous use.

Free prize offerings are legal only when all conditions under which they are offered are made clear, states another consumer law. It is illegal to tell a consumer that he is eligible to win or has won a prize if, in order to receive it, he is required to pay a service charge, handling charge or other similar charge.

Automobile salesmen have an undeserved reputation for cheating the consumer, commerce officials said. But often, unwary car-buyers can be trapped into paying for unreceived services if those services are not put in writing.

Consumer protection right No. 7 is simple: All statements made by salespersons about a motor vehicle must be included in a written contract.

Deposits or "good faith" money often lead to bad faith on the part of the buyer if he does not get specific deposit information in writing. Such information should guarantee that the seller does not continue to sell an item after he has accepted a deposit, and should include specific item and cost descriptions.

A seller is guilty of deception if he doesn't deliver promised merchandise, or later offers you other merchandise in place of your original request. If this happens, he is required to either deliver the item promptly, or refund your money.

A door-to-door salesman or telephone solicitor must indicate immediately that he or she is trying to sell you something.

These direct solicitations are not legal if:

—you are told falsely you have been "specially selected" to receive a product or service.

—you are told you have won a contest when you have not.

—you are not told of your right to cancel a contract within three days after signing it, or if you are given the wrong information on your right to cancel.

—you are told falsely the product cannot be bought elsewhere.

—you are told falsely you will receive a discount, rebate or other benefit for allowing your home or other property to be used as a "model" for advertising purposes.

Watch those afternoons! that's when colds strike

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The body's natural defense against colds and flu rises and falls in a daily cycle which hits its weakest point in the afternoon, a University of Southern California research team reports.

The natural protection against respiratory diseases afforded by the substance immunoglobulin is greatest from 2 a.m. to 8 a.m., the USC School of Medicine researchers said.

"Which is just when people don't need it, of course," Dr. Everett C. Hughes, head of the research team, said Monday.

Hughes said immunoglobulin, which neutralizes bacteria and viruses to protect against colds and flu and other respiratory diseases, is continually carried away by the mucous flowing from the nose and mouth to the stomach.

Hughes said the researchers found that immunoglobulin was not replenished steadily by the body, as previously thought.

"People make a lot more of it between 2 and 8 a.m. and they make a lot less of it in the afternoon between 1 and 8 p.m," Hughes said.

"There is a threefold difference between early morning and late afternoon."

The USC researcher said people are thus most susceptible to colds in the afternoon, when the body's production of immunoglobulin is at its lowest.

"If there's ever an epidemic, that's the time of day to go hide in a bar or go to bed and get away from people," he said.

Collectors' show set this weekend

A prediction of fair weather for the weekend points to another capacity influx of exhibitors and hobbyists at the Central Ohio Gun and Indian Relic Collectors Association's June show at the Fairground Saturday and Sunday.

Advance bookings have been heavy, according to Kenneth Craig, president of the association, and Coyt A. Stookey, secretary-treasurer.

The Mahan, Youth and Merchants buildings well be filled with a wide variety of collector material, and the popular summer flea market will spread over almost every square foot of the main exhibition ground.

There is no admission fee, but the usual 25-cent parking charge will be made.

Competition this month covers old powder flasks, and a trophy will be awarded, Craig said.

Members of the association are not allowed on the Fairground before noon Friday. Exhibitors will begin setting up at that time.

There were more than 700 stations at the May show. Attendance topped 4,000.

C. of C. member goal in sight

R. Bruce Galloway, second vice president and director in charge of the Washington Chamber of Commerce 1973-74 membership drive, has reported that 422 memberships have been received or pledged to date.

Galloway said the overall goal of 450 members can be attained since several renewal and new member prospects have yet to be contacted.

The drive has surpassed last year's total of 352 members and promises to be the most successful in the Chamber's history, Galloway said.

A Membership Retention Task Force, headed by Chairman Charles Bowersox, will conclude the follow-up portion of this year's campaign by early July.

Opening lead - ace of diamonds.

Here is a hand reported by Dr. James Parrack in the British Bridge Magazine. As usual, the doctor casts his favorite character, Ffred, in the role of hero.

Ffred was the dealer and opened one spade. It is true that most players would have opened two spades, but Ffred was seldom inclined to do what most players would do.

West overcalled with two diamonds and East raised the ante to five. This development did not faze Ffred, who bid five hearts in what can best be described as a forcing voice.

North thereupon came to life and raised Ffred to six, which West doubled after two passes. West led the ace of diamonds.

Ffred ruffed, of course, and played the king of hearts, East showed out. It is probably true that most declarers at this point would have shifted their attention to spades, but this prosaic thought did not cross Ffred's mind.

Instead he cashed the ace of clubs. When West's queen fell on it, Ffred's face lit up like a Christmas tree. Situations of this type were a source of great joy to him and he proceeded to bring home the contract in his customary bang-bang style.

He led the six of hearts and finessed the eight. Then, after ruffing the jack of diamonds with the queen of hearts, he led the seven and finessed the ten. After Ffred now cashed the ace of hearts, discarding his king of clubs on it, he was able to run dummy's five remaining clubs and thus score twelve tricks.

During the post-mortem, when Ffred was asked why he had not tried to establish the spades instead of the clubs, he replied, "What spades?"

Julie Eisenhower firmly backs Dad

By FRANCES LEWINE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Julie Nixon Eisenhower is the lone member of the President's family speaking out about Watergate these days and stauchly backing him up.

Like a political campaigner, she is accepting numerous public appearances, has appeared on television and speaks to a varied groups several times a week—even several times a day lately.

Julie is stepping up her schedule, while Pat Nixon is being seen less frequently.

The President's 24-year-old daughter has been receiving ovations — even kisses—for her efforts.

In two White House sessions this week with teen-agers— presidential scholars and Republican youth leaders—Julie took on questions, press-conference style in the East Room where her father has held his infrequent televised news conferences.

"If we took a poll now about how Watergate would affect Republicans (candidates), the results probabiy wouldn't be very good," Julie told the Teen-Age Republicans from across the country Wednesday.

"But," she explained, "that's because we have a lot of charges coming out of the hearings. We have a lot of hearsay. We don't have all the facts yet. We haven't heard from all the people who've been accused."

She got what she considered "a vote of confidence" for the President from the 240 teen-age GOP leaders who came to the White House reception.

For the next three years, Julie said: "I hope to be very active in my father's administration—taking a lot of speaking engagements and meeting groups."

"Did you and Mr. Eisenhower ever consider running for office? she was asked.

"I think we would consider it," said the President's daughter. But she said there weren't any definite plans.

Right now, after the White House, Julie said, she might go back to teaching. Her parents will be going to California. But her husband David suggested a retirement role for Nixon—as baseball commissioner.

Mini-bike accident hospitalizes boy, 14

A 14-year-old Washington C.H. youth was admitted to Memorial Hospital Wednesday night following surgery for injuries suffered in a mini-bike accident on the Fayette County Fairground.

Lowell Nelson Rudd, of 720 Clinton Ave., sustained a severe laceration of the thigh and minor abrasions in the 6:40 p.m. mishap.

Sheriff's deputies said Rudd lost control of his bike on a curve while riding on a Fairground drive. The bike traveled left of center, colliding with a bridge guardrail and throwing Rudd onto the pavement.

Officers said charges in the mishap are pending further investigation.

Sheriff's Deputies also investigated a minor hitship accident on the Jeffersonville-West Lancaster Road which occurred late Wednesday. Officers said a car ran off the roadway and damaged five rods of fence on property owned by Mrs. Howard Allen, of 624 Oakland Ave.

Probe Guard copter crash

AMELIA, Va. (AP) — The Army has launched an investigation into the crash of a helicopter near this southern Virginia community in which four members of the Ohio National Guard were injured.

An Army spokesman said engine trouble tentatively had been listed as the cause of the crash. The accident occurred just after noon Wednesday while the OH58 copter was on a training mission.

The men were identified Wednesday night by Lt. Col. Joseph P. E. McCann of the Ohio National Guard as:

WO Richard J. Russell, 36, of Russell Township, Ohio; CWO Harold L. Leimbech, 42, of Wellington, Ohio; Spec. 5 Joseph S. Benedik, 29, of Canal Fulton, Ohio; and Spec. 5 David A. Sebald, 24, of North Canton, Ohio.

The men were picked up by a second helicopter on the same flight and flown to Kenner Army Hospital in Ft. Lee, the Army said. One was treated and released and another later was transferred to the Portsmouth Naval Hospital.

Elvis replaces stolen Louisiana camp equipment

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Singer Elvis Presley, on learning that thieves had ravaged a Louisiana camp for needy boys, pledged $1,000 to get it ready for opening day.

"Elvis called me after reading about the thieves in the newspaper," said Col. Tom Parker, Presley's manager. "He told me to check into this and send them a check, and that's what I'm doing," Parker said in a statement telephoned here Wednesday.

Officials said robbers broke into the camp in Hogden Monday night and stole supplies donated for sessions that are to begin July 15. The camp is operated by volunteers of the Louisiana State Police.

Young fashion designers go for sensible elegance

By ANN HENCKEN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The theme was elegance when 12 young designers gathered to talk fashion.

They were a quiet, sensible group, short on bold ideas but long on adaptibility, nostalgia or smooth-looking commercial concepts.

They discussed their fashion philosophy Wednesday and showed fall clothes at a luncheon sponsored by the Wool Bureau, Inc., an organization for promotion and research in wool.

The audience was as interested in the rising wool prices— up 15 to 20 per cent—as they were in the styles.

However, some of the clothes were so nostalgic one viewer was prompted to ask: Why are you doing such old-looking clothes if you're supposed to be young designers?

"We think that glamour is important. Our contemporaries would like to have some of that back again. We love it. I don't see why we can't do it,' said designer Pinky Wolman of Pretty Boy Floyd, who showed a slicked-up flannel tuxedo with top hat.

She added that her generation had never enjoyed the glamour of clothes done in previous decades.

Another designer who must have been inspired by the question was Jonathan Hitchcock of Hitchcock, Ltd., who showed an above-the-ankle skirt and pulled-down sweater. Several said they had done some longer skirts for fall.

There were several versions of the big Seventh Avenue trends: the wrap coat, the elegant day dress and the tweed pants suit.

"If we change things too quickly, we make it impossible for a woman to keep her wardrobe over a period of years," said Jane Janedis of Kelita, who featured a conservative green tweed pants suit.

Pitcher gets to bat as Chisox snap skid

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Who was that designated hitter? That was no designated hitter—THAT was Cy Acosta.

The Chicago White Sox player Wednesday became the first pitcher to hit for himself in the American League's Year of the Designated Hitter.

"I didn't realize he was the first one when I sent him up," said Chicago Manager Chuck Tanner after the White Sox' 8-3 victory over the California Angels.

Acosta's historic appearance was hardly worth it—he struck out.

An inning before Acosta got a chance to make incidental history, the White Sox had the game wrapped up. Pat Kelly's first home run, a three-run shot, highlighted a six-run seventh for Chicago.

The inning helped the White Sox break a five-game losing streak.

In the other American League games, the Cleveland Indians beat the Detroit Tigers 7-6; the New York Yankees trimmed the Baltimore Orioles 2-1; the Boston Red Sox turned back the Milwaukee Brewers 3-2 and the Texas Rangers blanked the Minnesota Twins 3-0.

George Hendrick knocked in the winning run with a single in the last of the ninth inning to power Cleveland over Detroit. Hendrick won Tuesday night's game for the Indians in exactly the same manner.

Hendrick, who also hit three home runs Tuesday night, hit another one for Cleveland Wednesday. The blast, his 14th of the season, came in the seventh inning and gave the Indians a 6-2 margin before the Tigers rallied to tie the game in the top of the ninth.

Designated hitter Jim Ray Hart hit a two-run homer and Sparky Lyle rescued Mel Stottlemyre from an eighth-inning jam to help New York beat Baltimore.

Stottlemyre had a one-hitter going until the Orioles mounted their biggest threat of the night in the eighth. Lyle came in with men on second and third and gave up a run on a ground ball before nailing down the victory. It was Lyle's 18th save, 11 of them in the Yankees' last 11 victories.

Kurt Bevacqua delivered the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the 12th inning to give Kansas City its triumph over Oakland. The A's tied the game 4-4 with two runs in the ninth on an RBI double by Gene Tenace and a sacrifice fly by Joe Rudi.

Rick Miller and Reggie Smith belted home runs and Bill Lee scattered nine hits to lead Boston over Milwaukee. It was the Brewers' third straight loss after 10 straight triumphs.

Sonny Siebert hurled a six-hitter and Vic Harris tripled in two runs, pacing Texas over Minnesota.

Bucs slip to basement

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"At this time of the year, it doesn't matter whether we are in first, last or fifth place," Pittsburgh Manager Bill Virdon was saying. "The only time that matters is the last day of the season."

The Bucs, defending champions in the National League East, took occupancy of the basement by losing 5-3 Wednesday night to the Chicago Cubs while the Philadelphia Phillies were scrambling into fifth place by edging the New York Mets 4-3. The Cubs retained their 4½-game lead over Montreal's surprising Expos and dumped the Pirates 9½ off the pace and half a game back of the Phillies. It was Pittsburgh's 14th loss in the last 18 games.

In the National League's other games, Cincinnati downed San Francisco 7-5, Montreal whipped St. Louis 5-1, San Diego turned back Houston 6-2 and Los Angeles beat Atlanta 6-5 in 11 innings.

The Phillies bounded into the heady atmosphere of fifth on the strength of Wayne Twitchell's four-hitter and run-scoring singles in the fifth inning by Terry Harmon, Willie Montanez and Greg Luzinski.

Those hits overcame the Mets' 3-1 lead, built in the fourth inning on Felix Millan's single, John Milner's triple, Ed Kranepool's sacrifice fly and Wayne Garrett's homer. Luzinski had doubled for the Phils' first run in the first inning.

Homers by Tony Perez and Hal King highlighted the Reds' six-run outburst that sent the Giants down to their ninth loss in the last 11 games. The homers countered clouts by Bobby Bonds and Tito Fuentes.

The Expos reeled off their ninth victory in the last 12 games on the strength of John Boccabella's three-run homer in a four-run third-inning that keyed a 13-hit assault against the Cardinals.

The Padres, halting their losing skid at 10 games, got a pair of runs-batted-in on a single and a sacrifice fly by Dave Winfield, the left fielder selected earlier this month in baseball's free-agent draft. Steve Arlin scattered nine Houston hits, one of them Doug Rader's eighth homer.

Dave Lopes walked, Bill Buckner singled, then Atlanta third baseman Darrell Evans booted Steve Yeager's two-out grounder, giving the Dodgers their victory, which widened their West Division lead over the Giants to three games.

Ruth victim attacks those who aid Aaron

SHANNON, Miss. (AP) — The man who gave up Babe Ruth's final two home runs says present-day pitchers should think about only one thing when they face Hank Aaron—if the Atlanta slugger is up against them seeking his 715th home run: knock him down.

"If I was pitching and Aaron came up needing one more homer to break Ruth's mark, I'd dust him off," says 70-yearold Guy Bush. "Anything to get him out of the game. He would know I'm not his friend."

Bush commented after several National League pitchers said they would not mind giving up Aaron's 715th home run, the one that would break Ruth's all-time home run record.

Bush had no kind words for those pitchers, nor for baseball Commissioner Bowie Kiuhn, who warned the pitchers they could be suspended for "helping" Aaron.

"I've never heard anything like what these pitchers are saying," Bush said. "It's absolutely criminal. If this happens, I'll be ashamed I ever played the game."

Bush says Kuhn was too soft on the pitchers. He says longtime commissioner, Judge Kenesaw Landis, would have dispensed quickly with such utterances.

"If Landis were the commissioner of baseball now," said Bush, who gave up Ruth's final two homers on May 25, 1935 in Pittsburgh, "he'd have this little matter cleared up in about one hour.

"I'm telling you that Judge Landis would have marched those boys into his office, deuniformed them, and sent them on their merry way with a permanent suspension.

"They would never have seen the inside of a major league park."

Rotary Wheels, Levi Boys notch wins in LL Majors

The Rotary Wheels moved into a crowded two-way tie for second place in the Little League Majors standings Wednesday night by topping Halliday's Mustangers in a 10-5 contest at Wilson Field.

In other Little League Majors action, Kaufman's Levi Boys scored a 7-1 win over Downtown Drug.

Action in the Little League minors at Armbrust Field saw the Junior Firemen post an 11-4 win over the Loafers and Helfrich pop the County Bank by a 16-1 count.

BRIAN DODDS hammered a home run and Freddie Jones, David Ginn and Steve Balahtsis contributed doubles for the Rotary Wheels, who notched their fifth win in seven starts to land in a second place tie with the Charge-A-Checks.

Todd Terrell and Joe Smith clouted back-to-back homers for the Mustangers, now 4-3 on the season. Jones and Belles hurled for the winners and Terrell was the losing pitcher.

Wheeler had a double and single and Sturgeon cracked a pair of singles in support of Forsythe's one-hit pitching performance in Kaufman's victory. Pritchett was the losing pitcher and Murphy had Downtown Drug's only hit of the game.

George Robinson's grand slam home run paced the Junior Firemen to their win over the Loafers.

Leisure slammed a home run to lead Helfrich's win over the County Bankers.

RIDDLE OUT AT PLATE — Washington C.H. Post 25 leftfielder Scott Riddle is tagged out at the plate by Greenfield catcher Steve Harvey after he attempted to score on a passed ball during a game between Washington C.H. and Greenfield in South Central Ohio League play Wednesday night at the WSHS diamond. The umpire is Jerry McCoy.

Rodgers spins two-hitter

Booming bats snap Post 25's nosedive

By MIKE FLYNN
Record-Herald Sports Editor

Washington C.H. Post 25's American Legion baseball team, idled the past 10 days by poor weather, turned in an impressive showing in its season debut at the Washington Senior High School diamond Wednesday night.

Post 25 received a splendid two-hitter from lanky righthander Randy Rodgers and some powerful hitting from a total of 11 players to clobber Greenfield Post 298 in the South Central Ohio League clash 17-2.

SCOTT RIDDLE, Larry Rodgers and Alan Coppock sparked a solid 16-hit offensive attack as Washington C.H. snapped a three-game nosedive. It was Post 25's first win inside the SCOL pennant chase after a doubleheader loss 10 days ago.

Riddle, the smooth Post 25 leftfielder, slugged a three-run homer, a double and a single in four trips to the plate and knocked in a total of five runs. Larry Rodgers smacked a solo home run and a double while Coppock had a perfect night at the plate with three hits in three trips including a double and drove in three runs.

Randy Rodgers, in his first starting assignment of the summer campaign, handcuffed the Highland Countians as he permitted a hit in the third and another in the fourth. The hard-throwing Madison Plans product whiffed a total of eight Greenfield hitters and retired the last 10 men he faced. Only one of Greenfield's runs was earned and Rodgers issued three walks.

Manager Tom Cole's Greenfield team, which suffered its sixth straight setback inside the SCOL, sent three hurlers to the mound in an attempt to quiet the booming Post 25 bats. Larry Crabtree was tagged with the loss after working only two and two-thirds innings. Post 25 roughed Crabtree up for eight runs on nine hits. He was followed to the hill by Steve Willett and Chris Nelson with the latter being the most effective after yielding two runs on three hits in two innings of duty.

Post 25 zipped to a 2-0 lead after two innings, but erupted for six runs in the third inning when a total of 10 batters strolled to the plate. Doubles by infielder Steve Haines and Coppock highlighted the inning. Crabtree faced nine Post 25 hitters in the inning before he was yanked in favor of Willett.

IT DIDN'T take long for Washington C.H. to figure out Willett as the Fayette Countians rode a three-run blast by Riddle, two walks, three Greenfield fielding miscues and a perfectly-executed squeeze bunt by outfielder Mark Johnson to a seven-run explosion.

Ten batters also appeared in the productive fourth inning before Willett could work his way out of the mess.

Manager Dennis Morris, with a lopsided 15-2 lead and facing the prospect of five games in the next four days, substituted freely in the fifth inning. The Post 25 subs quickly touched Nelson for two runs in the fifth inning to cap the one-sided contest.

Haines was a key in Post 25's offensive punch as he had a double in two official trips and scored three runs. Catcher Paul England continued his torrid hitting streak with a single in three appearances.

Joe Stewart and Doug McElwee accounted for Greenfield's only hits, both singles.

Post 25, now 1-3 on the season, travels to Miamisburg tonight for a non-league contest.

Jeff, Good Hope post Babe Ruth loop wins

Jeffersonville kept pace with Willis Insurance in the Fayette County Babe Ruth League pennant chase by nudging the Medics in a 7-6 struggle Wednesday night at the Jeffersonville diamond.

In other Babe Ruth League action, Good Hope squeezed past Wilson Chevrolet in an 8-7 tussle at Roszmann Field.

Coach Ron Helmick's Medics erased Jeffersonville's 6-1 lead with a five-run outburst in the seventh inning to knot the score 6-6, but the Jeff team came up with a run in the bottom of the eighth inning to post its fourth victory in five summer outings.

PHILIP SWIGERT, who relieved starter Tyree, picked up the win for Jeffersonville as he hurled one and two-thirds innings of no-hit baseball.

Sizemore and Smith sparked a 12-hit attack for Jeffersonville as each doubled and singled while Spears had three singles and Tyree contributed a pair of hits.

Johnson doubled to pace the Medics' effort and Jones was the losing hurler.

Home runs were featured in the Wilson Chevrolet-Good Hope contest.

Waters slugged a two-run homer in the third inning and also had a pair of singles to ignite a six-hit attack for Good Hope, now 2-2 on the year.

Randy Gardner clouted a grand slam home run in the first inning when Wilson Chevrolet zoomed to a 5-2 lead and later added a solo homer and a double in a six-hit effort.

Brant Dunn provided ample backing in Good Hope's attack with a double and Dean Shonkwiler had a pair of singles for Wilson, which suffered its fifth straight setback.

Stewart started for Good Hope, but was relieved after one-third of an inning when Wilson exploded for five runs. Bakenhester came on to work six and two-thirds innings, giving up three runs on five hits and picked up the win when Good Hope scored three runs in the top of the seventh inning to erase Wilson's 6-5 lead.

DEWEY FOSTER started for Wilson and hurled six and two-thirds innings before he was relieved by Dee Foster.

Wilson Chevrolet catcher Scott Sefton was injured in the contest when he was hit in the back of the head while preparing to bat between innings. Sefton was taken to Fayette Memorial Hospital where three stitches were required to close the cut. Wilson coach Gary Dunn said Sefton is expected to be out of action for about two weeks.

Tourneys close gap in Wednesday loop

The Tourneys tightened the race in the Wednesday Night golf league by scoring a 12-8 win over Maxfli at the Washington Country Club.

The win left the Tourneys only a point and a half off the pace of the league-leading Staffs.

Irvin Reeves shot a 44 to pace the Tourneys over Maxfli and in other action, the Staffs, behind Everett Rudolph's 44, scored a 12½ to 7½ win over the Reds. Robert Herron, subbing for Hayward Johnson, had a fine 39 for the Reds.

Gordon McCarty fired a 45 and four other players had identical 48s in the Dots' 13-7 win over the Titleists.

Wottle runs sizzling mile to turn back Prefontaine

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — "I knew I had him after three laps," exulted Dave Wottle, victor over Steve Prefontaine Wednesday night in a sizzling mile clocked at 3:53.3.

Another Olympic gold medal winner, Rod Milburn, equaled his own world record in the 120- yard high hurdles at 13.0 seconds. No one was within 10 yards at the finish.

How fast could he have gone? "I know it would have been under 13.0," said Milburn, the NCAA champion from Southern University.

The performances of Wottle and Milburn were the highlights in a nearly impromptu track and field meet attended by 12,000 delighted fans. The meet was pulled together during the past three weeks to raise funds to restore the west grandstand at Hayward Field, where the University of Oregon has developed so many distance runners.

Wottle and Prefontaine leave for Europe this month for a summer's campaign against Europe's best.

Skip Kent of Wisconsin, who won the 880 collegiate title in 1:47.2, ran a lifetime best of 1:56.4 in winning that event.

Randy Williams, Olympic gold medalist from Southern California, lost to UCLA's James McAlister in the long jump. McAlister leaped 26 feet 7½ inches. Williams was second at 26-1¾.

Oregon's Mac Wilkins never got a chance to go after Randy Matson's collegiate record in the discus. Wilkins, who won the AAU title Saturday with a throw of 211-11, pulled a groin muscle while hurdling in practice Tuesday.

World record holder Jay Silvester won the discus with a throw of 202-9. Olympian Tim Vollmer, formerly of Oregon State, took second at 202-3.

Reds win fourth straight

Driessen stays hot in Cincy's 7-5 win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two weeks ago Dan Driessen was "just having fun" tearing up the American Association for Indianapolis. Today the Cincinnati Reds' rookie third baseman is just about the hottest hitter in the National League.

Driessen collected three hits for the second straight game against generous San Francisco pitching Wednesday helping the surging Reds to their fourth straight victory, a 7-5 conquest of the Giants.

"I thought I'd be struggling — after all, this is the big leagues," said Driessen, who triggered a six-run, fourth inning rally with an infield hit and ended it with a run scoring single.

Driessen now has 16 hits in 38 trips for a .421 average after his first 11 major league games.

He was batting .409 at Indianapolis at the time of his recall after hitting at a .360 clip for the Reds in spring training.

"I really don't know why I'm going so well," Driessen said.

"I'm just going up, seeing the ball and hitting it. I was a little worried when they called me up because I was just having fun hitting at Indianapolis.

Two other newcomers joined Driessen in contributing to the victory, following in the footsteps of newly-acquired Fred Norman, who shut out the Giants Tuesday night.

Lefthanded reliever Dave Tomlin, whose previous major league experience included four games and five earned runs in 6 1-3 innings of work, retired the only 10 Giants he faced to save the victory for Don Gullett, 7-5.

Catcher Hal King, who has seen major league action with the Pirates, Braves and Randers, made his first appearance as a Red and responded with a towering homer to right field in the fourth.

"I thought I pitched well enough to make the club this spring, but they wanted experience," said Tomlin. "I was pitching well at Indianapolis (1.17 ERA) and I knew the Reds were having pitching trouble so I was hoping I'd get called up."

The Giants, who have dropped nine of their last 11 games while their pitchers have yielded 71 runs, had little to cheer about except for the persistent power hitting of leadoff batter Bobby Bonds.

When Bonds opened the first inning with his 18th homer it represented his 22nd career leadoff homer, a new National League record. Eddie Yost holds the major league mark with 28 homers starting a game.

Righthander Elias Sosa, 4-1, made his first major league start and had his ERA balloon from 2.13 to 3.21 as the Reds erupted in the fourth.

"When you score five runs a game it should be enough to win with any kind of decent pitching," lamented Giants' manager Charlie Fox. "Taking Sosa out of the bullpen is robbing Peter to pay Paul, but someone has to do the job."

There are times, when doing rough work where appearnace is not important, when it is better to use a cheap paint brush.

Those times are few and far between.

A good quality paint brush doesn't just last longer. It gives you better service right from the start. It picks up more paint, which means less dipping and effort.

The paint goes on smoothly without excessive dripping and splattering. The bristles are set securely in the ferrule and do not shed easily. A good brush gives excellent results all the time. A poor brush never gives good results, even when it is new.

The bristles of a good brush should feel springy and elastic. They should have splits or "flags" at their ends, an aid in spreading the paint evenly.

EXCEPT for professional painters, few persons get the full life out of brushes. There nearly always comes a time when, after a paint job, a brush is hastily and improperly cleaned or not cleaned at all. Then, when the brush gets hard or dirty, it appears to be too much trouble to salvage it with a chemical cleaner and it is discarded. Even if it is put back into shape, it means unnecessary expense.

A brush should be cleaned as soon as you are through using it, the one exception being when it is to be used again in a few hours or the next day. Then it must be suspended in the proper solvent (turpentine or mineral spirits for oil paints, enamel and varnish; water for water-based or rubber-based paints; denatured alcohol for shellac; lacquer thinner for lacquer.

The trouble with that procedure is that sometimes you never get back to the project in the planned time, the solvent evaporates and you have a hard-brush problem.

After cleaning a brush with the proper solvent, it should be washed with a mild detergent and water and wrapped in wax paper, aluminum foil, oilcloth or any similar type of wrapping.

Be certain that, whichever way the brush is stored, the bristles are not kept in a bent position.

Some authorities do not favor the use of water on any brush used for oil paint, varnish, lacquer or shellac, but the results are satisfactory if you do not soak the brush and do not use a strong alkali soap.

A VARNISH brush should be used only for varnish, a paint brush only for paint, and so on. A nylon brush should not be used for shellac.

Place an identifying mark on each brush handle to indicate what it was used for the previous time.

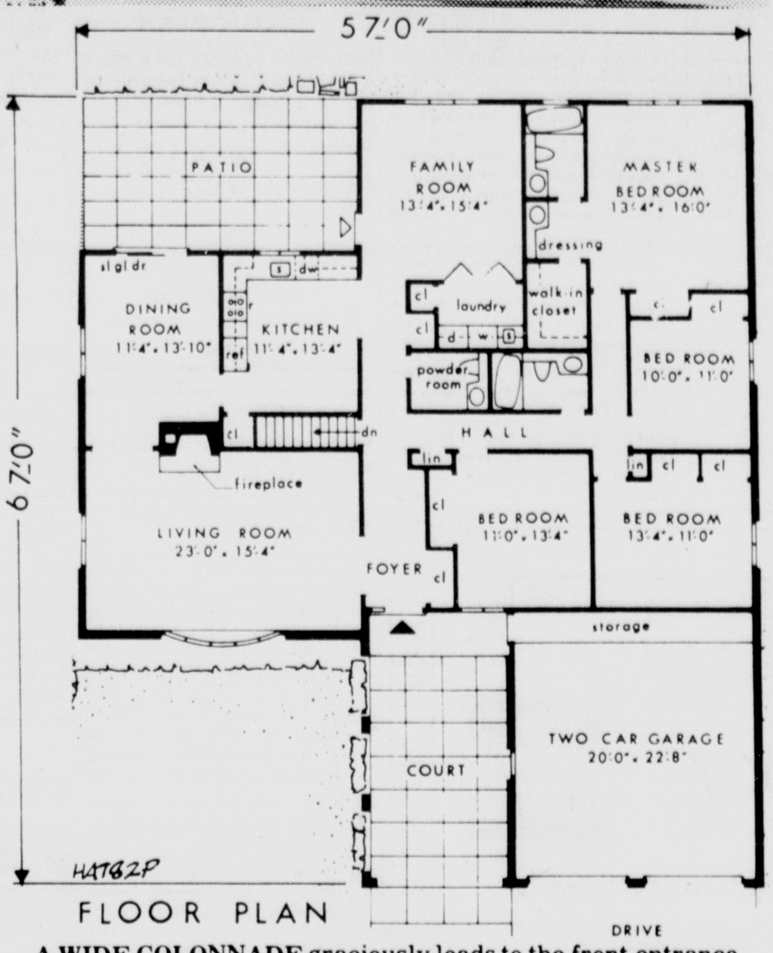

You should have the right kind of brush as well as the right quality. For large, flat surfaces, a 4-inch brush is about right. For woodwork, paneling and trim, use a trim or sash brush 2 or 3 inches wide.

A flat or oval sash brush from 1 to 3 inches wide is best for sashes, trellises and things of that nature.

For furniture, toys and objects with small, flat surfaces, there are flat enamel or varnish brushes, chiseled to permit easier flowing.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

FLOOR PLAN

A WIDE COLONNADE graciously leads to the front entrance of this compact and efficiently designed, four-bedroom ranch, Plan HA782P. The living room, dining room and kitchen are separated from the bedroom wing by a foyer and central hall. The family room could easily be converted into a guest room or fifth bedroom. The master bedroom has a full bath plus a second sink in a dressing area adjoining a large, walk-in closet. The house contains another full bath and a powder room. The architect of this 2213-square-foot house is Samuel Paul, 107-40 Queens Blvd., Forest Hills, N.Y. 11375. Anyone interested in the price of the blueprint may write to him.

Here's the Answer

Q. — I need some help in one aspect of finighing the attic in our Cape Cod house. In considering how to make a door opening, I am puzzled as to whether it must be reinforced at the top and sides or whether this step can be skipped.

Isn't the reinforcement required only when it's part of a load-bearing wall. In this case, it definitely is not a load-bearing wall since I am building it from scratch.

A. — You're right that a wall of the type you mention will not be load-bearing; that is, it won't be helping to support the roof or a floor above. But you still must put extra 2 by 4s above the door frame and at each side of it.

Those extra pieces of lumber will keep the frame intact under the stress it will undergo each time the door is opened and closed. The difference is that, with a load-bearing wall, the extra pieces must be heavier and stronger lumber.

Q. — Our attic has subflooring that is rough but strong and apparently well built. I want to put down resilient tile flooring. I have been advised that I will first have to lay a regular floor over the subfloor and then place the tiles on that. Can't I put the tiles down right over the subfloor?

A. — It is not wise to lay the tiles directly on the subfloor. But neither do you have to install a regular floor. What you need is an underlayment of either hardboard or plywood on which the tiles can be placed.

The 4 by 4 sheets are easiest to handle. Merely nail them to the subfloor, with about a 16th of an inch space at the joints and you will have a solid, smooth surface for the tiles.

Q. — The old gypsum board walls in the children's room are in such bad shape that I want to replace them. Do I have to take down the old boards to put up new ones? I plan on using the same kind.

A. — No. You can put new gypsum wallboard over old. However, it would be wise to place a vapor barrier between the two. Plastic film will do.

Or you might consider a type of wallboard that has a vapor barrier on one side of it. It's more expensive than the plain, but will save you time and trouble.

Blob on Painesville lawn declared only a slime mold

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — What do you do with a blob on your lawn?

Debby Chapman of Painesville kicked the one that cropped up in her back yard.

It bled. She said it looked like blood.

Her mother called the sheriff. He called the Environmental Protection Agency in Painesville. That agency notified its Columbus office and sent a staff worker to the Chapman home to watch the blob.

The sheriff thought it bore watching too. He sent a couple of deputies.

The blob, surrounded by authority, spread out on the lawn for the night.

The EPA began investigating. The red pancake-like blob was sent to the office of Dr. Kenneth Applegate of the EPA water quality division.

Applegate recognized the blob as a slime mold, a not-uncommon occurrence during extremely wet weather.

Dr. John A. Schmitt of the botany department at Ohio State University said most slime molds grow on dead organic matter and this one probably was growing on dead grass. He said they are "really quite common", but that people don't usually notice them.

Schmitt said they are not known to cause disease in humans, although a few people may be allergic to the spores. A combination of water and temperature accounts for their sudden, rapid growth.

Applegate said the slime mold found at the Chapman home belongs to a class of molds distinguished by their ability to move. The red blob can slide about very slowly like an amoeba, he said.

"I didn't actually see it, but I could have sworn it moved a few inches up the sidewalk," Mrs. Chapman said.

Most people don't notice them, despite their abundance, because they only show up on wet days, Applegate said.

The Weeders Guide

The time has come to worry — if you must — about how green the grass will grow on your side of the fence.

The lawngrass growers are doing a great deal to give you better grass but you still have to help make it stay attractive. There are many new varieties of grass.

Our friend Dr. Robert W. Schery of The Better Lawn and Turf Institute says each one is worthwhile for some useful role — as backup species in lawn mixtures, for places where the going is tough for less well-adapted varieties, or where lawns must respond to local peculiarities, uses, and preferences.

"We have come to realize that the best way to combat lawn disease is to use disease-resistant grasses rather than undertake tedious fungicide sprayings," says Schery. "Perhaps the day is not distant when we will also have varieties unpalatable to insects such as sod webworms."

The newer cultivars, Schery reported, are selected for nice density at a lower mowing height than was suited to older types. They generally have "prettier" texture, deeper color, longer season, faster seed sprouting and more aggressive spreading.

SCHERY contends that proper feeding is perhaps the most neglected means of weed control. You'll get help in this respect from slow-release plant food made to order for turf.

The experts reminds that not all varieties are best suited to all regions. Cool weather varieties generally are available in seed. The better southern turfgrasses, Schery says, come mostly from plugs, sprigs or sod.

He recommends that from the border states southward, cool weather grasses be used only in favorable situations, such as partial shade, north-facing slopes, good soils, mowed taller than usual, and watered properly in hot weather. Some grasses that do well in coastal areas can't take rugged midwest weather. Blending varieties to meet special conditions is a good system.

HERE ARE some new bluegrasses:

Adelphi, from Rutgers University, dark green, intermediate texture.

Arboretum, from Missouri, durable in southern parts of bluegrass belt.

Arista, from Europe, a strong performer in seed blends.

Baron, from Holland, lowgrowing.

Bonnieblue, from Rutgers, durable hybrid, very dark green.

Fylking, soft-green prize from Sweden.

Galaxy, also from Rutgers, intermediate texture, dark green.

Merion, traditional standard of excellence.

Nugget, outstanding, from Alaska, dark green, dense carpet.

Pennstar, fine-textured, beautiful.

Prato, from Europe, good compaion in seed mixtures.

Sodco, slow-growing, may need less mowing, derived from Purdue University selections.

CLEMSON UNIVERSITY reports that Penncross bentgrass and Jamestown fescue maintain excellent density no matter how low they are cut — even at heights low enough to cause most grasses to lose their foliage and require regeneration of new shoots to survive.

Both varieties have short leaf stalks and strongly bend-back leaf blades.

Home lawns of bentgrass are typically mowed at least a half inch tall and those containing fescues at an inch or more.

Dinah's George does it himself

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

A wifely nudge may be all that is needed to awaken the latent talents of a do-it-yourselfer, advises actor George Montgomery, commenting on his 28 years in the big world of build-it-yourself.

For him it happened when he was married to Dinah Shore. In 1945 he reconstructed the rotting doors of her station wagon, and she promptly bought him a lathe and "on every conceivable occasion" gifted him with work tools.

The rugged, handsome six-footer went on to become the movie colony's best known do-it-yourself as he maintained his acting career.

He began by making furniture—mostly early American — first a Windsor bench and then Queen Anne, and he built houses which are now getting to be collectible. He is always learning new things. He can now install plumbing.

"When we bought a very small ouse on a marvelous piece of property, I really got with it," he observed. "With a couple of carpenters I added some 8,000 square feet, which included a big projection room."

He built a workshop in the backyard of that house in Encino, Calif., but later a complete factory was built in a properly-zoned area, and he has had as many as 15 cabinet workers helping him turn out his designs, which he always draws right on the lumber. He liked to do raised paneling, cabinets, doors, wood trim, finishing it in the factory and carting it to the house site.

In a short time the word had become "let George do it" as the Alan Ladds, Gary Coopers, Fred McMurrays and Bill Bendixes — among his first customers — come to ogle and then say, "that is just what we need." He gutted and remodeled Robert Taylor's house and filled the Jack Webb house with his furniture.

IMPROVISATION may be the key in maintaining interest, he insists. His ideas evolve as he proceeds. At the moment he is more or less thinking about the kind of furniture he wants to put in his new house at Palm Springs. Pueblo-style of crude stucco and adobe brick, it will be unique, he explained. Huge boulders are to partition a split level area with the help of a 130-ton leased crane. Cave-like showers will be built right into rock formations. A bar and barbecue will overlook a reflector pool.

"But the most important part of the house is the foundation — I always make them wider and deeper than necessary — and I always make sure the house is properly braced," he remarked. City codes keep most builders on their toes, but a lot of slipshod building occurs in those two areas."

The house will be big even though he is a loner, who entertains only occasionally. His children, Melissa 24, and John, 19, might visit.

Montgomery "turned plumber," he said, the day he was presented with a bill of $263 for labor and $71 for materials by two plumbers for a couple of hours work at the factory.

"People do no realize they can do such jobs until they try. After an earthquake busted a couple of lines under the slab floor at my house I picked up some pipe and elbows and replumbed the whold house when I moved the lines to the attic. I've already put in the septic tanks and sewer lines at the new house site and I'll save about $8,000 doing my own plumbing, I figure."

In addition to preparing for two movies in Yugoslavia and Thailand, and supervising the house and furniture plans, he will tour 20-or-so cities as a consultant on wood finishing for Johnson Wax, for whom he has done some television commercials. It will be a labor of love. He will be talking about something he knows a lot about, he says. His furniture is mostly solid wood, some with burl inlay. He incises some objects. He feels there is nothing duller than wood without some configuration, "But I really don't need to do anything-any more if I don't want to," he says. "And I build my houses for easy-care."

HIS PRESENT 7,000-square-foot, Mediterranean-style house overlooking all of Beverly Hills has been planned so that it doesn't require a housekeeper — he can vacuum the whole thing in less than an hour.

Montgomery furniture is collectible but not bargain-priced. A set of Queen Anne — chairs and dining table, Welsh dresser — originally sold for $7,000 but was recently resold at $24,000. A desk appraised at $1,500 cost him $275 to make, he proudly observed. He estimates he has turned out thousands of pieces of furniture in his career. When Johnson wanted to show some of his pieces in New York recently, Montgomery located a truckload of it right there.

His large hands — "I milked about 30 cows a day as a boy on our ranch in Montana" — need to be kept busy with the manual work he loves, he says. At 12, he was an A-plus student in mechanical drawing and art, and bold enough to redraw plans for a house his father was building for his sister. A good deal of the appreciation he feels for early American furniture and architecture was inspired by his friendship with Watson Webb Jr., a Hollywood film editor, who now heads an early American restoration project begun by his family in Massachusetts.

Damaged car burns; arson seen possible

A 1962 model car, apparently involved in a slight accident, was destroyed by flames on Creek Road at Rock Bridge Wednesday night. Sheriff's deputies are investigating the possibility of arson as the cause of the fire.

Sheriff's deputies said the car, bearing no license plates, ran off the road and knocked over two road signs near the bridge. A five gallon can, which has apparently contained gasoline, was found near the front of the car.

Wayne Township firemen were called to the scene to extinguish the blaze. Washington firemen were originally called to the fire but were unable to cross Rock Bridge due to the high water.

The incident is still under investigation.

FOUR DAYTON AREA men are being held in the county jail, charged with breaking and entering a vending machine at a U.S. 35 and I-71 service station Wednesday morning.

The four charged were James T. Horn, 19, Gary L. Shock, 21, Michael I. Blanchard, 20, and David K. Burdett, 19.

According to the Sheriff's Department's report on the incident, the four were apprehended in Madison County and then returned here. They were arrested after the attendent at Yeoman Gulf station, noticed the four flee from the soft drink vending machine which had been forced open.

Only $2 in change was removed from the machine.

The four are scheduled to appear in Municipal Court Thursday afternoon.

Howard W. Kelly, Rt. 1, New Holland, reported the theft of a land leveler from a building lot on Washington-Waterloo Road Wednesday. He said the leveler had apparently been loaded onto a truck or trailer and hauled away. The machinery was valued at $225.

Mexican jet crashes; fear 27 are dead

PUERTO VALLARTA, Mexico (AP) — An Aeromexico jetliner with 27 persons aboard crashed near a village south of here Wednesday night on a flight from Houston, Tex.

Authorities said they had no early word on whether there were survivors.

A partial passenger list indicated there may have been several Americans on the flight. Fourteen of the passengers who started the flight in Houston remained aboard after the first stop in Monterrey, Mexico.

The fiery crash occurred about 11:30 p.m. EDT after the plane apparently exploded over Banderas Bay while on a final approach to the Puerto Vallarta airport.

Weather conditions were reported good at the time.

After stopping here, the plane was to make stops in Acapulco and Mexico City.

Several Puerto Vallarta residents and the airport traffic control officer reported seeing a fiery flash in the sky over the sea as the DC9 approached the city.

Pedro Vega, the Puerto Vallarta police commandant, said the plane crashed against a hill near the small village of Chimo, about 25 miles from here on the Pacific coast. Rescue teams used boats to reach the crash scene. Land travel along the mountainous coast is difficult.

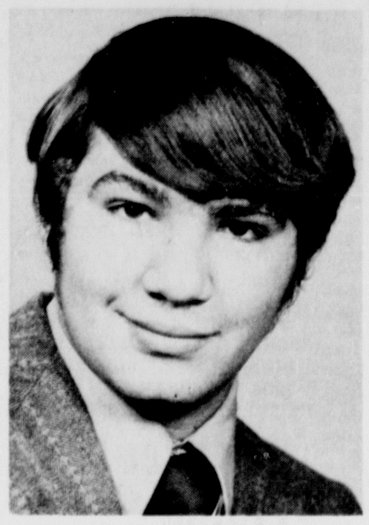

The control tower officer said the pilot, Capt. Carlos Fernandez de Lara, apparently had no problems as he was cleared for a final approach at about 14,000 feet over the Pacific ocean.

The officer said Fernandez de Lara tested his landing lights and suddenly there was a bright flash.

Aeromexico, formerly known as Aeronaves de Mexico, is a government-owned airline that has many international flights. This was the line's first major crash in several years.

Zoners table church issue

One variance was granted, and a request for another was tabled at a meeting of the Washington Zoning Board of Appeals Wednesday night.

Tabled was a request by the First Baptist Church for a conditional use permit to construct a new sanctuary at 212 S. North St. within one foot of an adjoining property. Church officials reported they have a verbal option to purchase the adjoining property.

The board tabled the request until a written agreement is reached between the two property owners.

A variance was granted to Ronald Shackelford, 822 Briar Ave., to operate a part-time bicycle repair business in his garage.

Jailed man asks extension of prison stay

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — Richard D. Leuw pleaded guilty to two counts of forgery and asked a favor of the judge.

Would the judge mind if he stayed on in the Cumberland County prison for awhile longer instead of being transferred right away?

Leuw, of nearby York, said he had made arrangements for relatives to visit him at Carlisle in July and recounted: "I have made a lot of stops in my life, but the county prison is one of the best."

With a smile Judge Clinton Weidner said, "Don't say that too loud. We may become overpopulated at the prison."

Leuw got the extension.

Court tightens pornography restrictions!

'Social value' doctrine now more relaxed

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a 5-4 decision reversing a decade-long trend toward permissiveness, the Supreme Court today severely restricted the range of pornography protected by the Constitution.

In an opinion written by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, the court held:

—Local community standards rather than national standards may be used in determining whether material is obscene and therefore not protected by the Constitution.

—That juries and courts no longer need to find that material is "utterly" without redeeming social value before they declare it obscene.

Instead, Burger wrote, they may determine whether the work "taken as a whole lacks serious literary artistic, political, or scientific value."

"Hard core" pornography was the target of Burger's opinion.

"One can concede that the 'sexual revolution' of recent years may have had useful byproducts in striking layers of prudery from a subject long irrationally kept from needed ventilation," Burger wrote.

"But it does not follow that no regulation of patently offensive 'hard core' materials is needed or permissible; civilized people do not allow unregulated access to heroin because it is a derivative of medicinal morphines," Burger continued in the majority opinion.

He was joined by the three other appointees of President Nixon, Justices Harry A. Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell Jr., and William H. Rehnquist, and veteran court member Byron R. White.

Burger noted that for the first time since the court declared obscenity to be beyond the protection of the First Amendment in 1957, "a majority of this court has agreed on concrete guidelines to isolate 'hard core' pornography from expression protected by the First Amendment."

Critics of a standard based on local community attitudes have complained that it would require publishers, motion picture producers and others to produce material that would meet the standards of the nation's most prudish community.

Nuclear agreement from summit talks?

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — The leader of the world's two most powerful nations, Richard M. Nixon and Leonid I. Brezhnev, are poised to sign a breakthrough document designed to eventually corral the threat of nuclear devastation.

The agreement, which provides instructions to technical experts stalemated in Geneva, at the Strategic Arms Limitation talks (SALT), was molded by Nixon and Brezhnev on the third day of their summit talks.

The leaders planned to return their travelling summit to Washington from this hideaway mountain compound today to formally sign the broadly worded accord in the gilded grandeur of the White House. Signing also was scheduled for a bilateral pact pledging coperation on the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

Nixon and Brezhnev, who came to this presidential retreat 75 miles northwest of Washington Tuesday night, spent most of Wednesday afternoon and evening talking about international issues and the stalled efforts to achieve permanent limitations on their countries' massive nuclear arsenals.

As they began Wednesday's session, Brezhnev told newsmen that his talks with Nixon "without question," would produce "good results."

The agreement giving instructions to the Geneva SALT negotiators is not a treaty, but is considered essential to get the stalled arms limitations talks moving again.

It could rival in importance the pair of pacts reached last spring in Moscow when Nixon and Brezhnev held their first summit. Those accords placed permanent limits on nuclear defense systems and a five-year limitation on some offensive missiles.

Before coming to Camp David, Nixon and Brezhnev witnessed the signing of four modest bilateral agreements on agricultural, oceanographic, transportation and cultural exchanges.

Then, while they were at the presidential retreat Wednesday, lower-level officials signed a reciprocal income tax agreement.

Brezhnev is to host a banquet for Nixon and other ranking U.S. officials tonight at the Soviet Embassy, before meeting Friday morning with 40 select representatives of the American business community—presumably to encourage U.S. investment in his country.

Late Friday, the two leaders head west for Nixon's San Clemente, Calif., villa where they will continue the talks until Sunday, when Brezhnev heads back for Washington and a Monday departure from the United States.

PRIVATE WORD — Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev has a private word for President Nixon as the two stand on balcony at the White House.

Indictees arraigned

'Not guilty' is plea in murder case

Two persons, indicted by the Fayette County grand jury, appeared before Common Pleas Judge Evelyn W. Coffman Wednesday afternoon to enter pleas to the charges against them.

John Allen Brown pleaded not guilty to a charge of second degree murder, and Oval McCallister pleaded guilty to a charge of stabbing with intent to wound.

Brown, 21, of Frankfort, is charged with the fatal shooting of Demeatris Winfield, 17, Chillicothe girl at a Gregg Street residence in April. Judge Coffman did not announce a trial date.

McCallister, of Rt. 4, Washington C.H., was charged after he allegedly stabbed his son following a domestic quarrel at their former residence in Bloomingburg. The penalty for the crime to which he made the guilty plea is from 1 to 20 years in the State Penitentiary. Judge Coffman will await a full investigation of the facts and circumstances leading up to the stabbing before she sets a date for sentencing.

A third person, indicted by the grand jury, Harley Miley, of Hillsboro, was scheduled to appear, but it was reported that his attorney was unable to be present. A new date for his arraignment will be set after his attorney is contacted.

Miley is charged with incest, statutory rape and indecent assault. Miley, who allegedly had licentious relationships with three minor girls near Jeffersonville in February, is being held in the county jail.

Living costs spurt again during May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher costs for food, clothing and gasoline pushed consumer prices up sharply again last month, the government reported today. The increase was at a slightly slower rate than in April, however.

The Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics reported the rise in the cost of living in May at six-tenths of one per cent. This works out to an annual rate of 7.2 per cent, down from the 8.4 per cent annual rate of increase that was projected in April.

In a separate report, the bureau said the purchasing power of workers declined last month because of price increases.

Food again accounted for a big rise in the cost of living, increasing nine-tenths of 1 per cent in May to a level 14.5 per cent above a year ago. On a seasonally adjusted basis, grocery prices rose 1.1 per cent in May.

Slayer Keaton captured near scene of escape

Convicted murderer Cleo Vernon Keaton, 35, of Dayton, who escaped Friday from the Lima State Hospital for the Criminally Insane, was captured Wednesday night in Cairo, eight miles north of the institution.

Arresting officers said Keaton offered no resistance.

Keaton and George Fisher, 23, of Columbus, escaped from the hospital Friday after they removed a lock from a courtyard door then piled mattresses and springs to clear the 25 foot wall surrounding the hospital.

They were at first thought to have headed for Columbus where Fisher had relatives.

Keaton, known as "the Good Samaritan killer" was convicted of the murder of Maurice Francis of Williamsport in March of 1965. Francis had stopped to help Keaton with his disabled car when he was gunned down.

Keaton at that time was fleeing from presecution from three shootings in Dayton, two of which resulted in deaths.

A Pickaway County jury convicted Keaton of first degree murder in the killing. He was sentenced to death in the electric chair.

Controversial farm plan OKd

WASHINGTON (AP) — After accepting a new subsidy limit and a target price plan to support major commodities, the House Agriculture Committee has tentatively approved a farm bill loaded with controversy.

The panel, finishing its preliminary chores Wednesday with a 28 to 4 vote favoring its draft version of the new general farm legislation, arranged to meet today for its final decisions on the massive package.

It includes a $37,500 per crop annual subsidy payment ceiling instead of the current $55,000 level. A Senate-passed version would put a $20,000 annual subsidy limit on each farmer. The House, in a key vote last Friday on the Agriculture Department appropriation bill, decided to go along with the Senate's $20,000-a-farmer approach and went another step by voting to bar the sale or lease of cotton acreage allotments after Dec. 31.

As the House committee put the last touches on its draft of the general farm bill Wednesday, Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz pledged to battle proposals which would provide guaranteed prices for wheat, corn and cotton that are above levels urged by the Nixon administration.

Under terms of the legislation, basically similar to the Senate-passed bill, the existing 1970 law—due to expire Dec. 31—would be changed by setting up a so-called target price concept of supports under cotton, wheat and feed grains such as corn and grain sorghums.

This would mean crop subsidies, running some $3.5 billion a year, would be eliminated as long as there is a continuation of existing relationships between farm prices and crop production costs. If prices farmers get should drop sharply while production costs go up or remain unchanged, then they would get subsidy payments.

Under the four-year House committee bill, target prices for the first year would be $2.05 a bushel for wheat, $1.38 a bushel for corn and 38 cents a pound for cotton. The figures in the five-year Senate-passed bill are $2.28 for wheat, $1.53 for corn and 43 cents for cotton.

Ohio Bell bid nixed by justices

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Supreme Court says it has no authority to order the Public Utilities Commission to grant the Ohio Bell Telephone Co. an emergency rate increase.

The court was requested by Ohio Bell to order an emergency increase or set a date when the rate increase would be decided.

The PUCO argued that it alone has authority to decide what rates should be and it was no business of the court, a spokesman said.

Ohio Bell requested a $115 million, or 18 per cent, rate increase.

Report Nixon was bugged in '68

WASHINGTON (AP) — The late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover once told President Nixon that electronic surveillance had been used against Nixon in the 1968 presidential campaign, John W. Dean III has quoted the President as saying.

Nixon is said to have replied he would have to use bugging to his own advantage sometime in the future.

That exchange is reported in an official summary of Dean's closed-door testimony before the Senate Watergate committee last Saturday.

The summary gives few details. Sources close to the investigation said Wednesday the conversation was not pursued at the executive session and the fired White House counsel indicated he would explain it further at the committee's televised hearings next week.

The White House has refused to comment on Dean's testimony until after he appears "in public under oath."

The summary gave this account of a meeting between Nixon, Dean and former presidential Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman last Sept. 15, the day a federal grand jury returned indictments against seven men in the Watergate break-in and bugging case:

"Dean met with the President after the indictments had been handed down. Nixon said Haldeman reported what a good job Dean had done.

"Nixon said that Hoover had told him that Nixon had been bugged in the 1968 campaign, and Nixon said that sometime in the future they would have to use it to their advantage."

A source close to the investigation was asked if the summary meant Nixon planned to use the report that he was bugged as a political issue or planned to use bugging.

"He meant bugging others," the source said, referring to Dean's account of the conversation.

The summary also said Dean told investigators that the White House and the Committee for the Re-election of the President sabotaged a House committee's pre-election investigation of the Watergate affair, on President Nixon's orders.

Rep Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, wanted to conduct a full-scale investigation of the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic headquarters after his staff learned that campaign funds routed through a Mexican bank were used to help finance the operation.

Patman became embroiled in a struggle with a Republican member of his committee, Rep. Garry Brown of Michigan, over whether the probe was to continue, and the battle climaxed Oct. 3 with a 20 to 15 committee vote against granting subpoena power for the investigation.

Brown said in an interview Wednesday that his fight with Patman started before Dean's meeting with the President and that he knew of no pressure applied to anyone on the committee by the White House.

Gun battle mars Peron return

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentine strongman Juan D. Peron spent his first night home from exile under tight security after gunfire left 13 persons dead by official count and more than 250 wounded in a huge welcoming crowd.

Peron and his third wife, Isabel, were at the official presidential residence in suburban Olivos. Security measures there were stricter than those around his chalet in another neighborhood.

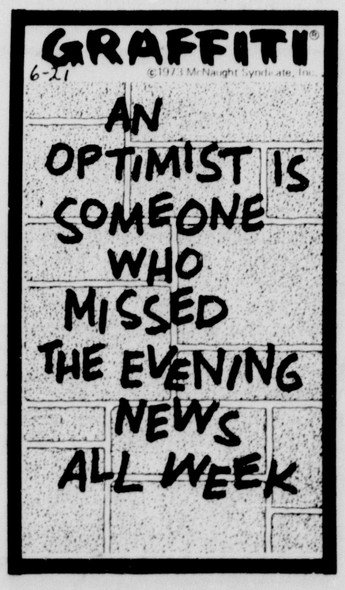

The former dictator planned to hold a news conference tonight.

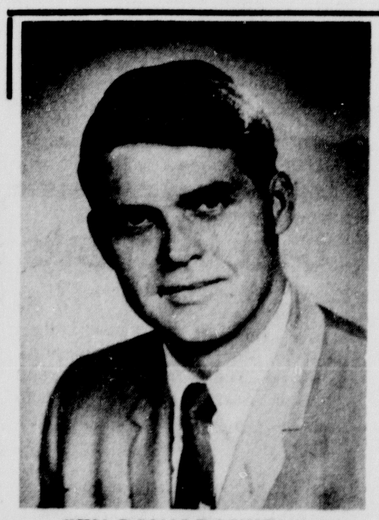

The violence erupted Wednesday morning when gunfire crackled through a throng of two million gathered near Buenos Aires airport to greet the 77-year-old leader.

Local newspapers, after checking hospitals, put the death toll between 20 and 30 and the number of wounded around 400.

Weather

Partly cloudy tonight and Friday. Lows tonight in the 50s, highs Friday again around 80.

SEN. DONALD LUKENS

Court rules Lukens off ballot

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Supreme Court ruled that state Sen. Donald E. "Buz" Lukens is not eligible to be a candidate for any political office in 1974.

The high court Wednesday, in an unanimous decision, upheld Secretary of State Ted W. Brown's ruling that Lukens was ineligible because he did not file his 1972 Senate race expense account on time.

Lukens can, under law, complete his present term. He has announced his candidacy on the Republican ticket for governor in 1974.

He also indicated he might seek a U.S. Senate seat if Sen. William Saxbe, R-Ohio, did not seek reelection.

Lukens did file an expense statement—listing no money received and no money spent—12 days after the deadline, which by law is 45 days after an election.

He said he mailed an earlier statement, which the Butler County Board of Elections said it did not receive.

Lukens was married to a Columbus model Saturday and is now honeymooning in Switzerland.

His attorney, John Zonak, said he will have to confer with Lukens when he returns, but he anticipates further court action, either to the U.S. Supreme Court or to a federal district court.

"I have the utmost respect for the Ohio Supreme Court, but sometimes we don't always see eye to eye," Zonak said, adding that he was not surprised by the decision.

Lukens, a former two-term congressman and a one-time president of the national Young Republicans club, finished second in a three-man GOP gubernatorial primary in 1970.

He is considered by professionals in both parties as an aggressive campaigner.

Lukens, 42, went to the Ohio Supreme Court when Brown, a fellow Republican, refused to accept his candidacy petitions for governor.

The court said Lukens' contention that Ohio law requiring personal expense statements from a candidate

Seek break in logjam on budget

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Conferees on Gov. John J. Gilligan's $9.9 billion budget bill hope to get moving today after three sessions that brought no decisions. "We haven't decided anything," Speaker Pro Tem Vernal G. Riffe Jr., D-89 New Boston, said Wednesday. "We've got to get down to business on this thing."

Riffe's comment came on a busy day that included action on several major bills, including one that would repeal Ohio's Sunday closing laws. The House passed it 62-32 and sent it to the Senate.

Also approved by the House were bills to require razing of gasoline stations abandoned for six months, and to give a five per cent increase to members of the State Teachers Retirement System, School Employes Retirement System, and Public Employes Retirement System. That measure, which had 58 sponsors, received 93-0 approval of the lower chamber.

The Senate voted 31-0 to increase benefits of widows and dependents of members of the State Police and Firemen's Disability and Pension Fund. The boost for widows would be from $130 to $160 a month with the amount for each dependent child going from $45 to $55. Sole survivors would get $150 instead of the present $120.

Also passed by the Senate and sent to the House were measures revising procedures for licensing nursing homes, requiring newspaper notice of sales for the purpose of settling delinquent taxes, and allowing veterinarians to dispose of animals unclaimed after 10 days, provided owners are notified.

The Senate received resolutions providing for the reorganization and administration of state courts and permitting judges below the common pleas level to receive salary increases during their current terms of office.

The House approved a Senate bill permitting the director of the Division of Wildlife to set regulations to protect endangered wildlife species in Ohio. The bill deletes state authority for the payment of bounties except in the case of foxes. The House defeated a proposal clarifying the right of county commissioners to acquire land for airports.

Riffe and Rep. Myrl Shoemaker, D-83 Bourneville, who is chairman of the budget conference committee, accused Republican conferees of "foot dragging" at Tuesday and Wednesday sessions.

Shoemaker, without mentioning names, said he was miffed because some members of the six-member committee came to Tuesday night's session after a dinner that included drinks. He cancelled a Wednesday night meeting. "I'm not going to listen to any more of those martini speeches," he said.

The committee is trying to resolve Senate-House differences in the measure which is needed to run state government for two years starting July 1.

So far, members only have compiled a list of problem areas in proposed spending for education. There has been no formal discussion of about $100 million in cuts made by Republican senators in budget requests by Gilligan's executive departments.

There were reports that in private discussions, an agreement was being talked about that would restore about $20 million of the cuts, with the money coming out of $75 million Republicans earmarked for income tax relief for married taxpayers filing joint returns.

Instead of providing a 10 per cent cut in the income tax bills of joint filers, the reduction would apply only to those in the lower tax brackets.

Claim prison boycott held

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Inmates at the Lebanon Correctional Institution have staged a one-day meal boycott to protest sanitation, food quality and working conditions in the food services area, the Ohio Prisoners Labor Union says.

Prison officials denied Wednesday any knowledge of the incident, which the OPLU said occurred Sunday.

The union said prisoners belonging to the OPLU were placed in the "hole" by prison officials Saturday for encouraging the boycott, which was then in the planning stages.

William Dallman, the prison's superintendent, acknowledged 10 inmates were isolated from other prisoners Friday night. But he said it was only a security measure.

violated the state constitution was not supported by his arguments.

In other business the court ruled that the federal Pay Board can't prevent the state from giving pay raises to state employes.

In its decision the court ordered the state to pay full salary to three Ohio State University employes who had been denied pay increases by a Pay Board directive.

The court held that "a federal administrative body lacks jurisdiction to prevent enforcement of otherwise valid state statutes establishing the compensation for classified state employes."

The court also dismissed a suit challenging a Democratic-masterminded legislative reapportionment plan that went into effect in 1971.

The suit was filed by former Rep. Lloyd George Kerns of Richwood, who was represented by Republican party attorney John McElroy, one-time chief aide to former Gov. James A. Rhodes.

The dismissal came under threat of contempt by U.S. District Judge Frank J. Battisti, who upheld the plan and took jurisdiction over the matter.

McElroy said after Battisti's order that he had no alternative but to ask the Supreme Court to dismiss the action. It paves the way for appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Skylab travelers plan for return

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Skylab's astronauts quietly and efficiently put their space station in order today as they prepared to return to earth Friday at the end of a record 28-day mission.

On their last full day in orbit, Charles Conrad Jr., Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz cleaned the house-size laboratory, getting it ready for the Skylab 2 crew that is to visit the station for 56 days starting July 27.

At their request, the astronauts were up an hour early today, at 2 a.m. EDT, to complete the two-day deactivation of the lab. Included was transfer of film, tapes and other experiment equipment into the Apollo ferry ship.

By 6 a.m., before most Americans were up, they were eating lunch and were ahead of schedule.

Later, the capsule communicator was greeted with a cheer when he told the crew the carrier Ticonderoga had practiced an Apollo recovery operation with a simulated landing at a distance of 4½ miles "and the time from splash to hatch open on the deck was 33 minutes."

"Fantastic," Conrad exclaimed. "But we hope to beat 4½ miles."

Scientists eagerly await data from the medical, earth resources, solar astronomy and other experiments, the most extensive ever conducted in space.

At 3:45 a.m. EDT Friday, the astronauts will detach the Apollo from one end of the 118-foot-long lab. After making a fly-around photographic inspection of the station, they'll execute the first of three engine firings that will bring them back to earth.

Splashdown is scheduled for 9:50 a.m. EDT in the Pacific Ocean 830 miles southwest of San Diego, Calif. The main recovery ship, the carrier Ticonderoga, radioed a favorable weather forecast for the landing—partly cloudy skies, 15-knot northeast winds, five-foot seas and a temperature of 67 degrees.

An end to the rain in Ohio except in the southeast and extreme eastern sections was predicted for today by the National Weather Service after showers and a few thunderstorms continued through the night.

Drier air is moving into the northwestern counties, the service said. A slow moving cold front extended Thursday morning from northeast to southwest across central Ohio. This front will move on eastward out of the state today.

Humid warm air ahead of the front is gradually giving way to a drier air mass spreading in from the west.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 60s with warmest areas in the extreme southeast where Ironton reported 71 degrees at dawn.

High temperatures this afternoon are expected to be in the 70s over the northwest and extreme northern sections and in the low to mid 80s elsewhere.

As the cooler air spreads in Friday, high temperatures are expected in the low 80s in the extreme south and in the 70s elsewhere in the state.

Dry weather is expected to continue through the weekend.

Heat blisters Californians

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thundershowers dampened the first day of summer along the Eastern Seaboard today while warm and humid conditions prevailed over most of the other sections of the nation.

A new storm front moved into the Pacific Northwest and scattered rain lingered over the Ohio River Valley.

A thunderstorm Wednesday evening downed trees and power lines in Carthage, Tenn., and dumped 2.7 inches of rain on Pinson, Ala., in just over an hour.

Southern California and the desert region remained unseasonably hot Wednesday for the third day in a row. The mercury hit 106 at Los Angeles, the hottest temperature for that date and the hottest day since Sept. 13, 1971. The National Weather Service said there would be no relief today since the temperature was expected to reach 105 degrees.

The hot weather, coupled with 35-mile-per-hour winds, touched off many forest and brush fires in Southern California. The worst was a 5,000-acre blaze in the San Bernardino National Forest, which threatened Cherry Valley, 60 miles east of Los Angeles.

Temperatures before dawn ranged from 43 at Rawlins, Wyo., to 93 at Needles, Calif.

2 Ohioans being held with cash

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—Two Ohio men found with more than $23,000 in a suitcase were charged Wednesday with carrying a concealed weapon and making a false statement to register a motor vehicle.

Agents of the Internal Revenue Service and Dayton, Ohio police were attempting today to determine where the money, in $1, $5, $10 and $20 bills, came from.

Rodney Elwood Prater, 24, and Jeffrey Lynn Bowshier, 23, both of Lebanon, Ohio, were arrested Tuesday after a jewelry store customer said he saw them "flashing large sums of money."

Police said the two had purchased more than $7,000 worth of diamond jewelry and watches at a local jewelry store and paid $6,000 cash for two motorcycles.

Harvey Sollars, chief of detectives, said the pair had been charged in Ohio with possession of narcotic paraphernalia but have not been tried.

Police also said the two were carrying a .32-caliber automatic pistol and a .38-caliber derringer.

Float cuts dollar down to 75¢

By FRED COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — An American who put aside money 18 months ago to pay for a trip abroad will find each dollar woth only about 75 cents of its former value in Europe today as a result of three devaluations.

He probably heard about the first two devaluations—formal steps announced by the White House and sent to Congress for approval. They reduced the dollar's buying power overseas by 8.58 per cent in December 1971 and by 10 per cent in February 1973.

The third devaluation might be a surprise to the traveler. It was a creeping devaluation, informal and unannounced, and decided in the market place, rather than through negotiations among governments.

Since devaluation No. 2, the dollar has been allowed to float against other important currencies according to supply and demand. Governments no longer were obligated to defend fixed exchange rates.

In some respects, the floating system worked. There were no more world monetary crises.

But the dollar kept floating— more or less steadily downward. Since February, it has lost about 7 per cent in its buying power against an average of leading world currencies, bringing the total shrinkage from the three devaluations to about 25 per cent.

Associated Press correspondents in several European capitals asked bankers, gold dealers, economists and government officials to explain the dollar's weakness since February.

Their answers were remarkably alike on the causes. But proposals for correcting the weakness were far apart.

All those questioned in The AP's survey mentioned Watergate and inflation prominently. They suggested that Watergate would weaken President Nixon's ability to solve U.S. economic problems and that American inflation would erode the value of the dollar.

"I see deeper economic causes in worldwide inflation," said Paul Lichtenberg, spokesman for the executive board of Commerzbank in Frankfurt, Germany. "The Watergate affair was probably only the psychological trigger factor...."

As confidence in the dollar has waned, wealthy individuals, multinational corporations and Middle East oil interests have shifted their assets out of dollars into the relative safety of gold.

"No one can say for certain whether the growing distrust in the dollar set off the run into gold or whether it was gold that undermined confidence in U.S. currency," a Zurich gold dealer said. "It is like asking which came first, the chicken or the egg."

Guido Carli, influential governor of the Bank of Italy, this month suggested either raising the official price of gold or letting government central banks sell gold on the free market. Either move would take pressure off the dollar.

French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing said the United States should support the dollar by resuming dollar purchases on world money markets.

Neither view has attracted much international support.

Economists, officials and bankers also differ on whether floating or fixed exchange rates are preferable.

While the arguing continues, money markets remain uncertain.

At the moment, gold is down from record highs and the dollar is up from record lows. But no one can say for certain what will happen next.

There is nothing to prevent the dollar from floating back up again, if the market decides it was oversold during its long slump. But more Watergate developments damaging to the Nixon administration could depress the dollar further.

Net farm income of $22 billion still predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department, for now at least, is sticking by a new prediction that net farm income this year will exceed $22 billion.

That estimate, despite a threat of fuel shortages and possible reductions in some crop production, would be up from the previous high of $19.2 billion last year.

It also would be about $1 billion more than USDA economists estimated for 1973 net farm income earlier this spring. The main reason for the improved outlook: higher prices of farm commodities.

But economists say privately that the $22 billion estimate is highly qualified and that much depends on how many acres of corn and soybeans, particularly, were actually planted this spring.

It also depends greatly on whether farmers can get sufficient fuel to cultivate and harvest crops this year. Weather, always a factor, could add further doubts.

The department will issue in July a report showing revised acreage plantings for spring crops. Although those will give a better idea of how production might shape up, production estimates based on field conditions will not begin until August for major spring crops.

Meantime, according to the Outlook and Situation Board, here is the official outlook:

"Prices, while remaining strong in the second half of 1973, may ease some from current levels. For the year, both crop and livestock prices may average more than one-fifth higher than in 1972.

"In addition, the volume of crop marketings likely will be up 5 per cent, assuming that record outturns of wheat, corn, and soybeans are achieved."

If this all happens, the USDA expects farmers to sell a record of about $73 billion worth of products this year, compared with $58.5 billion in 1972.

But much of the gain in gross sales will be offset by sharp increases in production expenses, especially for purchased feed, livestock and seed. Prices of almost everything else are up, too, including fuel, fertilizer, machinery, wages and interest rates.

Perleches in the Mouth

Almost all year round I have painful cracks in the corners of my mouth.

I once was told that this might be a vitamin deficiency. I take vitamins and eat an excellent nourishing diet and I know it cannot be because of this.

Miss B.W., R.I.

Dear Miss W.:

These tiny fissures at the angle of the mouth are known as "perleches."

It is true that a deficiency of the vitamin riboflavin can be responsible for this in children and adults. In the absence of such deficiency, other causes must be sought.

Excessive salivation, fungus infections in the corners of the mouth, allergies, and bacterial infections can cause tiny cracks which do not readily heal.

People who wear dentures tend to salivate a great deal and accumulate saliva in the angle of the mouth, causing a constant source of irritation. Children who have a large mass of adenoids and tonsils often salivate until these are removed.

The underlying condition, of course, must be rectified.

There are now a number of excellent ointments and creams that contain antibiotics and cortisone. These can be very effective.

Are there any special foods that should be avoided by people who have a hiatus hernia?

Mr. J.L., Calif.

Dear Mr. L.:

For my readers who are not acquainted with this condition, "hiatus hernia" (or "diaphragmatic hernia") is a weakening in the wall of the esophagus. It occurs at the point where the esophagus joins the stomach.

Vague symptoms of chronic heartburn and bloating may suggest to the doctor that the condition may exist. X-rays of the esophagus can readily demonstrate the presence of this disorder.

Not all cases of hiatus hernia are alike. Therefore, dietary regimes vary.

Generally, overeating, especially fried fatty foods, can be responsible for these distressing symptoms. It is for this reason that physicians urge patients with hiatus hernia to eat smaller quantities of food at more frequent intervals, rather than overload the stomach with one single large meal.

A program of weight reduction, in addition to sensible eating habits, may keep the hernia from progressing.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH — Many people seem to satisfy their consciences when they buy a new car that has elaborate seat belts. It is surprising how quickly this wonderful source of protection is then ignored.

See service cutback due to fund slashes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—David Sweet, director of the Ohio Department of Economic and Community Development outlined Wednesday program cutbacks he said will come if the legislature does not restore a proposed $3.4 million budget cut.

Sweet said the proposed cuts could jeopardize $1.24 million in federal money over the next two years for housing, regional planning, public facilities construction and community development programs.

Ferguson discharged

World citizenship concept

The Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh has given the old concept of world citizenship an intriguing new twist. Though certain misgivings come at once to mind, Father Hesburgh's stature as president of the University of Notre Dame and educator extraordinary lend weight to the idea he advances.

Certainly his central thesis in a speech at Harvard University rings a true note. If people scattered about the globe perceived themselves as being both national and world citizens, this might indeed tend to break down the national sovereignty which he considers "the one great remaining divider of mankind."

But many advocates of universal brotherhood may hesitate to accept Father Hesburgh's idea of setting up an international agency to grant world citizenship on the basis of commitment to world peace and justice.

One wonders how the determination would be made, and whether this might lead to a kind of elitism.

The basic idea is good. We suggest that it needs further refining.

WASHINGTON CALLING . . . by Marquis Childs

Jackson prepares path to White House

WASHINGTON — When a trend happens to coincide with the ambitions of a man with his eyes on the presidency the odds in the great game of politics are narrowed. The trend is toward a new isolationism.

Sen. Henry M. (Scoop) Jackson is exploiting the nation's discontents with a shrewd appeal to reject the blandishments of the Nixon foreign policy initiatives.

The state visit of Leonid I. Brezhnev, returning the Nixon mission to Moscow of a year ago, is for Jackson a golden opportunity. What he is saying has a familiar ring, recalling the dire warning of those who inveighed against American involvement in world affairs prior to World War II. Scheming foreigners would surely take Uncle Sam to the cleaners.

Jackson opposed the SALT I agreement signed in Moscow by the President and Brezhnev. That agreement, limiting defense ballistic missiles and with a five-year limit on deployment of offensive missiles pending the outcome of SALT II, was arrived at after lengthy negotiation.

The American delegation was led by specialists thoroughly versed in the intricacies of nuclear weaponry. The agreement had at least the tacit sanction of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

SOUNDING the alarm in the Senate, Jackson succeeded in putting over a resolution calling for numerical parity in any future agreement. This was the numbers game that conveniently ignored the over-all factors of nuclear strength as shown in the deployment of the multiple warhead on American missiles.

In his appearance on the "Face the Nation" television program Jackson carried this a step further. Since the President has been so weakened by the Watergate scandal, he suggested, anything that might be agreed to during the current visit is likely to be invalid.

That is one way to build a hedge against approval of whatever may come out of the lagging SALT — talks.

Blocking most-favored nation status in trade with the Soviet Union, Jackson noted with pride that 77 of his Senate colleagues were signed up with him. MFN, providing trading partners, is essential if MOSCOW and Washington are to expand trade, with Moscow buying computers and the other advanced equipment urgently needed.

It is the key to the series of agreements covering a variety of exchanges in science, medicine, the arts. That Brezhnev has staked his standing in the Politburo on tangible results from the growing relationship is a fairly safe deduction. The hardliners are said to be ready to prove the danger to Soviet security in relaxation with the West.

THE DEMAND Jackson is making that Moscow release the 100,000 or more Russian Jews who want to emigrate to Israel touches a deep emotional response. The hardships worked on Jews who ask to leave for Israel are one more evidence of the cruelties of a totalitarian system.

But what Jackson demands is far broader in scope. When he talks about the right of all persons to emigrate and then to return if they desire, he is calling for a complete change in the Soviet system.

However desirable that may be, it is beyond the power of one sovereign state to bring about a revolution in another sovereign state.

If we are not to do business with the Soviet Union, how are we to justify extensive aid to the dictatorship of the Greek colonels? Jackson's response is to say that he opposed military help for the colonels.

Or what about the repressive military dictatorship in Brazil? In a world of evil choices the United States cannot opt for purity in splendid isolation.

THE JACKSON appeal seems likely to take hold, in the opinion of this observer. The disillusion with government and politics in general growing out of the Watergate mess, the failure of America's allies in Europe to carry a fair share of the defense burden, the decline of the dollar, the inroads in inflation — these and a host of other reasons threaten to turn off the average citizen from the responsibilities of America's position in the world.

On the other hand, the immense weight of that position may in itself counter a retreat toward America's shores.

In Jackson's own state of Washington Boeing is selling ten 707s to the People's Republic of China. The market for America's advanced technology must expand beyond these shores.

THESE DAYS . . . by John Chamberlain

We could have had an energy policy

Everything connected with energy seems to be going wrong these days.

We have gas shortages and voltage cutbacks. A container ship, the Sea Witch, plows into a small oil tanker, the Esso Brussels, in the Narrows leading to New York harbor, killing several crew members in a flaming, oil-filled sea.

The Naderites demand instantaneously clean automobile engines, with complete indifference to the difficulties involved in getting both the carbon monoxide and the oxides of nitrogen out of the exhaust at one and the same time.

The anti-pollutionists and the conservationists seem eternally to be working at cross-purposes: the newer automobiles, with better emission control, get only 8 to 10 miles to a gallon of gas, which means that the Nader "improvements" will require an 11 per cent increase in total fuel consumption. The circle thus goes back to the dangers of collision as more tankers move into our ports with more crude oil destined for our overworked refineries.

It could all have been avoided.

Ten years ago, as I remember, I took a trip through the Appalachian coal country with Joe Moody, who was head of the National Coal Policy Conference. He kept talking about the need for a national energy policy, which would have resulted in some positive thinking about a blend of coal, hydroelectricity, oil, natural gas and atomic power use.

True, he put his main accent on coal, which led critics to say he was flacking for his own industry. But Joe Moody's interests were wider than that: he urged the need of a composite energy policy on both Richard Nixon and John Kennedy in the 1960 election campaign. Nothing came of it.

SO NOW we have the chickens coming home to roost.

The ridiculous thing about it is that our politicians have been scared witless by the shortsighted claims of the environmentalists. New Jersey politicos, fearful of polluted beaches, are categorically against setting up a deepwater single-point mooring installation off Sandy Hook that could accommodate the new 250,000 - or 300,000 - ton tankers.

Their fears are misplaced: a single big tanker pumping its cargo into an undersea pipeline for direct transmission to refineries in the northern New Jersey and Philadelphia regions would be a much safer proposition than four or five 75,000 ton tankers crowding into the Delaware River or New York harbor.

The U.S., up to 10 years ago, was the world's leader in the technological revolution. But today it seems incapable of learning anything new. Meanwhile, the foreigners have taken over.

The British, the Mediterranean countries, the Nigerians, the South Africans, the Japanese, the South Americans and the Indonesians have no aversion to deep-water loading and unloading of oil. By idiotic contract there isn't a single-deep-water oil terminal in the whole United States.

The State of Maine voted "no" on a proposition to bring big tankers into a deep harbor at Machiasport. The Big Stone Beach deepwater terminal site in Delaware was prohibited by Delaware's Coastal Zoning Act of 1971.

BUT JUST WHAT is it that the environmentalists fear?

Britain's Milford Haven oil terminal is located in a national park, and the Gulf Oil Co. Bantry Bay facilities in Ireland are set down in a region that remains attractive to tourists. At Rotterdam, in Holland, recreational beaches have been built with the sand dredged from the deepwater channels required by tankers.

Economic and environmental needs can be combined, but Americans, with their compartmented minds and emotional approach to problems, don't seem capable of learning from the British, the Irish or the Dutch.

The crazy thing about it is that we often react before we know what we are talking about. When offshore drilling for oil in the New England coastal region was first mentioned, Gov Tommy Meskill of Connecticut was among those to condemn the very idea. His constituents had visions of seeing oil wells in Long Island Sound.

They hadn't listened to the geologists, who might have reassured them that any prospective well would be at least 30 miles over the horizon on the farther side of Long Island. And they might have taken heart from the British and the Norwegians, who will be getting North Sea oil from pipelines leading from tanks situated out of sight on the ocean floor.

TO GIVE Gov. Meskill due credit, he has relaxed his original stand against offshore oil drilling. He told his fellow politicos at the recent Nevada governors' conference that energy needs must be considered along with ecological demands, which put him up alongside New Hampshire's progressive Gov. Meldrim Thomson Jr., who wants a refinery, deepwater unloading facilities, atomic energy plants and all that.

New England is worried about its lobster catch. Well, the shrimp catch in the Gulf of Mexico has been improved by the presence of offshore oil rigs, which seem to attract marine life. For all anyone knows, an offshore oil industry in New England might improve things for the local fishermen.

Man garners dirty jokes

By JOHN VINOCUR
Associated Press Writer

NICE, France (AP) — There's something distinctly unfunny abut a man who has filed away over 60,000 dirty jokes.

Gershon Legman admits it himself: for someone who doesn't mind being called the world's greatest authority on erotic humor, he's not a very ha-ha guy.

Legman has an archivist's heart that makes his telling of a filthy story turn into something like an ornithologist's sighting report.

"I heard this one first in central Tennessee..." he'll say, and then fill in an historical-psychological analysis of the story before absent-mindedly tossing away the punchline.

He began research in 1938 for the first volume of a book, "The Rationale of the Dirty Joke."

Until he stopped to spend more time on folk songs and limericks, Legman. of Scranton, Pa., went around talking to people about anything long enough until he could lay his standard question on them: "What is the dirtiest joke you've ever heard?" The answer was normally fed into the Legman filing system with scholarly rigor.

Legman, though an American, has lived in the south of France for about 25 years with much of time going into his great compilation, which has been published in about 10 languages.

What he has perceived is that American dirty stories often have racial or homosexual themes. The Germans and Dutch are scatological, he says, and the basic French motifs deal with adultery and impotence. Whatever the subject, he says, British jokes are essentially aggressive and full of one-upmanship.

Legman's theory on why people tell dirty jokes is that they are an outlet for hostility and anxiety.

"The teller is often forcing his jokes on his audience, and passing his fears on to them. When you laugh, he's reassured. Tell me your favorite story and I'll tell you something about your sex life."

Dear Abby:

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

New pool owners are flooded with friends

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are installing a swimming pool, and already everyone we know is asking if they can come over and use it when it's finished. We are not rich. We both work and are paying for this pool with our hard-earned money.

If we wanted to swim with a bunch of people, we'd go to a public pool. We are putting in our own because we want our privacy.

How do we tell these people that we aren't looking for company after our pool is completed? Or worse yet, what to say to the neighbors when they come knocking at our door in their swimsuits?

HIS AND HERS

DEAR H AND H: People with pools must have rules, but there's no point in alienating everyone before your pool is finished. Wait until it's ready for use, and alienate them one by one.

DEAR ABBY: Women are getting so nervy now with the Women's Lib thing, they are asking men to dance.

I had a harrowing experience the other night when my wife and I were at a public dance hall. She left me to go to the powder room, and you wouldn't believe the number of klutzes who moved in on me, asking me to dance with them. I am 68, bald and no bargain, but that didn't seem to make any difference.

Next time I'll go to the powder room with my wife. Phooey on equal rights!

BALDY

DEAR BALDY: Don't "phooey" so fast. Why shouldn't women be able to ask men to dance? Some men would be delighted. And those who aren't can always say no.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are legally separated, and I am expecting next month. The doctor says it will be twins. (I already have one child.)

I want to send out birth announcements. Is this proper under the circumstances? If it is, should I write in my name only where it says, "Parents" on the announcement? Or should I include his too?

I hadn't even thought it might not be proper until my family raised the question. They all have different opinions.

EXPECTING TWINS

DEAR EXPECTING: Under the circumstances, forego the printed announcements. Write a personal note to your close friends to inform them of the double-header.

DEAR ABBY: I am still chafing over the doctor who wrote that he resents his parents for allowing him to be circumsiged as an infant.

Point one: What mature person would harbor such resentment for a temporary discomfort that he can't even remember? And point two: If he knew his business, he would know that cervical cancer among women whose husbands are circumcized is far less frequent than among the others.

TV Viewing

NEW YORK (AP) — They're having a cage tilt this week, as they say in basketball circles. What makes it a bit different is that it's in mainland China and being videotaped by a U.S. firm.

The company is the New York-based TVS Televison Network, which says it'll show the first of eight scheduled SinoAmerican basketball games next Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. EDT on an estimated 125 U.S. stations.

It's the first such sports event—aside from those held during President Nixon's trip to mainland China—covered by an American TV company since NBC filmed the now-famous table tennis matches between U.S. and Chinese teams in April 1971.

The basketball battles are between a 12-man team of U.S. collegiate stars and the Chinese national men's team. A woman's championship team from John F. Kennedy College in Wahoo, Neb., also is on the tour and will compete against China's national women's team.

The TVS network, which got permission from the government of mainland China to tape the first game for showing in the United States, has specialized in covering U.S. collegiate sports since the mid-1960s.

TVS Vice President Alan Lubell said his company will go to Moscow to cover the World University Games which run Aug. 15-25. Often called the "collegiate Olympics," the games, involving U.S. college athletes, will include basketball, fencing, gymnastics and wrestling, among other sports.

Lubell said there'll be about a total of 10 hours of Moscow games that TVS teams will transmit for prime-time broadcasting on about 175 U.S. stations between Aug. 15 and 26. Most of it will be shown on the weekends.

He said TVS initially wanted to broadcast live-via-satellite coverage of the basketball matches in mainland China, but the Chinese government vetoed the idea for reasons they didn't fully explain.

"I used to brush my hair three times a day and look what happened!"

RURAL AMERICA IN THE MIST — If you have real artistic appreciation you can find beauty anywhere. This old barn, framed in the wan light of a misty June morning, appealed to a Record-Herald photographer. Not everyone would see it as a picture subject, but it will bring back memories to those who have their roots in the soil.

ASCOT, England (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II led the annual parade of high society and high fashion to the Ascot races.

Miss Reeves is June bride of William Royster Jr.

First Christian Church was a pretty setting for the marriage of Miss Cheryl Lynn Reeves, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Reeves, 714 Sycamore St., and William E. Royster Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Royster Sr., Rt. 1, New Holland.

The double-ring ceremony was performed at 2:30 p.m. June 10 by the Rev. Don Baker, before an altar enhanced with candelabra, trimmed in white satin bows and vases of white gladiola, white and blue daisies. The pews were marked with white satin bows. Miss Elaine Stookey presented a prelude of wedding music, with Alan Dunlap as vocalist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white eyelet A-line gown, styled with jewel neckline, empire waist and trimmed in powder blue and lace, with long scalloped fitted sleeves. It was made by the bride and a college friend, Mrs. Dennis Maggied. Her veil was elbow-length with fitted headpiece of white embroidered daisies and seed pearls. The train was trimmed in daisies and lace.

She carried a cascade of white daisies, white miniature carnations and white sweetheart roses, with babies breath and ivy, centered with a white and blue daisy corsage with streamers. Following the ceremony the bride presented both mothers with a long-stemmed white rose from her bouquet.

Miss Gloria Kushner, of Cleveland, college roommate of the bride, was maid of honor. Her floor-length gown of flocked powder blue voile, with sweetheart skirt, had short puffy sleeves, an empire waist and contrasting long satin bows. She wore a white garden hat trimmed in blue.

Mrs. Thom Coe, friend of the bride, was bridesmaid. Her dress was identical to that of the maid of honor, in mint green. She also wore a garden hat, trimmed in green. Both carried white nylon baskets filled with co-ordinating daisies and white miniature carnations, tied with blue and green streamers.

William Markle of Columbus, served as best man and Tim Royster served as groomsman for his brother. Seating the wedding guests were Mike and Steve Reeves, brothers of the bride.

The bride's mother chose a turquoise crepe street-length dress with long, sheer sleeves, accented with rhinestones. She had white accessories and her corsage was white daisies and pink sweetheart roses, with baby breath.

Mrs. Royster wore a light blue street-length dress of jersey knit, with long sleeves. She wore white accessories and had a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses and white daisies.

The grandmothers wore corsages of blue daisies and white miniature carnations.

MRS. WILLIAM ROYSTER JR.

Hostesses for the reception, in the church social room, were Mrs. James Teeters, Mrs. Roger Spahr and Mrs. Maggied. The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake, topped with a floral arrangement of white and blue daisies and white and yellow sweetheart roses, and had cascades of blue daisies gracing the tiers. Miss Roseann Royster, sister of the groom, presided at the guest book.

The new Mrs. Royster, a 1970 graduate of Washington Senior High School, will begin her senior year at Ohio State University, majoring in Social Work. Her husband, a 1969 graduate of Miami Trace High School, attended Columbus Business University and is now employed as an assistant foreman at Worthington Industries, in Columbus.

For the wedding trip, the bride wore a powder blue pantsuit. They are now living at 5478 Rockingham Court, Westerville.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at a dinner at The Sulky Restaurant, following the rehearsal Saturday evening.

Craig family concentrates in Bloomingburg

Mrs. B.A. Krantz, of Hyderabad, India, is in the last few weeks of a visit with her mother, Mrs. M.G. Morris and her sister, Mrs. Harry Craig and Mr. Craig, in Bloomingburg. She will rejoin Dr. Krantz in Hyderabad in July.

Dr. Krantz, who has spent considerable time in India in the past several years, first for the Rockefeller Foundation, then for the Ford Foundation, is presently assisting in the International Institute of Crop Research for the Semi-arid Tropics. He visited in Ohio earlier in the spring.

Other members of the Craig family visiting in the Morris-Craig home recently included Mrs. Gerald Ervin, of Tucson, Ariz., Mrs. Frank Taylor and son, Charles, of DeKalb, Ill., Dr. and Mrs. Paul Droste and children, of Columbus, Ken Krantz, of the College of Wooster, in Wooster, and Bob Krantz, of Muskingum College, New Concord, both sons of Dr. and Mrs. Krantz, and David and Richard Craig, sons of the Harry Craigs.

David left today for a sports-oriented camp near Zurich, Switzerland, where he will be head counselor. It is an international project, with participants from many countries.

Mrs. Ervin, the former Alice Craig, and her husband will leave the end of the month for Mexico to attend the University of Guadalajara, concentrating on the study of Spanish. This fall, Mr. Ervin will begin work at Ohio State University on his Ph. D, and will teach in a Columbus school.

But for a few days, much of the Craig family activity was centered in Bloomingburg.

Stir a little lemon juice and a lot of minced parsley into melted butter and serve with fish fillets that have been broiled.

AMERICAN FAMILY PLANNING

Olla Podrida sees India via slides

Olla Podrida Club, meeting Monday for a dessert course at Anderson's Restaurant, enjoyed an especial treat in the form of a taste of India, via the slide presentation and narration of Mrs. B.A. (Nellie) Krantz, daughter of Mrs. Mina Morris, who was hostess.

The dessert course was served at tables centered with planters, featuring yellow flowers, as Mrs. Nona Stevens, president, welcomed the guests, including Mrs. Krantz, Mrs. Robert Garringer, Mrs. John Sagar Sr., Mrs. Carrie Stephenson, Mrs. Virginia Whiteside and Mrs. Alice Cory.

In a brief business session, Mrs. Walter Parrett gave the usual reports, said that Mrs. Dorothia Slager asked that her name be withdrawn from membership and told the group that the club will dispense with meetings in July and August.

Mrs. Krantz, whose husband is an agricultural research scientist, with the Crop Research Institute, in Hyderabad, India—a thousand miles south of New Delhi — showed pictures depicting the Indian way of life, in a country one-third the size of the United States, but with a population of 507 million people, that population increasing at the rate of a million a month.

Despite the extremely over-crowded conditions, Mrs. Krantz had pictures of many beauty spots in India and discussed the agricultural problems - and the progress made - in the semi-arid country. Her interesting presentation left club members and guests with a better understanding of a country which seems remote, indeed, in Washington C.H.

Club members participating in the informative afternoon included Mrs. Elton Elliott, Mrs. Anna Groff, Mrs. Zoa Garringer, Mrs. Dean Powell, Mrs. Willard Bitzer, Mrs. Parrett, Mrs. Harry Bell, Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. Morris.

Guest night held

A dessert smorgasbord and a 'fun' style show featured the Christian Women's Fellowship of First Christian Church, meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. Mrs. Orpha Willis conducted the short business meeting.

Fifty members and guests enjoyed the pretty decorations in the church dining room, with vases of colorful flowers and clever nut-cup "wheelbarrows", made by Mrs. Lloyd Sowders, which were individual favors to take home.

The program, conceived by Mrs. Carl Meriwether, was in the form of a comical style show, narrated by Mrs. Harold Callendar. Models were Miss Janet Vance, Mrs. Beryl Raypole, Mrs. Robert Maust, Mrs. Robert Stackhouse, Mrs. David Lee Williams, Miss Becky Callendar, Mrs. Walter Parsley, Mrs. Tom Parsley, Mrs. Harold Fields and Mrs. Dave Lucas.

The hostess committee, who prepared the smorgasbord, was composed of Mrs. Ward Brown, Miss Jane Meriwether, Mrs. Hazel McNorton, Mrs. Milbourne Flee, Mrs. Charles Sheridan, Mrs. Caroline Haggard, Mrs. Allen Sells, Mrs. Mac Dews and Mrs. Forest Haines.

GRADUATES — Miss Mary Ann Hopkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice B. Hopkins, 660 Warren Ave., will graduate Friday from Riverside Methodist School of Nursing. The ceremonies will be held at Battelle Institute at 8 p.m. Following graduation, Miss Hopkins will join a surgical unit on 4-south at Riverside Methodist. She graduated from Washington High School in 1970.

Class has picnic

King's Daughters Class held their annual picnic and June meeting at the home of Mrs. Edith Parsley, with 14 members and six guests attending.

Mrs. Naomi Helm was in charge of devotions and Miss Verna Williams sang a solo.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FRIDAY, JUNE 22

ARIES
(March 21 to April 20)

Keep plugging, as the hard-hitting person puts it. This is the type of day that will require "digging in," making use of your fine stamina.

TAURUS
(April 21 to May 21)

The "little" errors could trip most, so be alert. You have no opponents so strong that they can't be handled with gentle persuasion and good intent.

GEMINI
(May 22 to June 21)

Poise and perseverance needed. As with those born under many other Signs, you also could encounter unexpected, and unusual, situations.

CANCER
(June 22 to July 23)

Present influences indicate some obstacles — not insurmountable, but annoying unless you retain your sense of humor — AND patience.

LEO
(July 24 to Aug. 23)

You have an exceptionally good planetary set-up now but must toe the line, nevertheless, to avoid friction with those who are not in so comfortable a spot.

VIRGO
(Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)

Caution should be day's keynote. Don't create unnecessary dilemmas through impulsiveness, and take no reckless chances.

LIBRA
(Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)

Take care in counselling others, imparting information. Avoid arguments as such, but discuss calmly important trends, transactions.

SCORPIO.
(Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)

Discretion should be your watchword. Keep disposition even in order to cope with the ruffled ones you meet — and there may be several.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)

A period for some introspection. Through reflection, you will get a clearer view of the road ahead, to make plans for further accomplishment and satisfaction.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)

Direct your innate enthusiasm into progressive channels. You can accomplish more than many others now. Expecially favored: written matters and travel plans.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)

Going it alone will not be the answer now. There are definite areas where you will have to associate with, plan with, others. Teamwork!

PISCES
(Feb. 20 to March 20)

Some plans may have to be changed whether you like it or not. Be composed, however, for you may well profit by the change. Keep your sense of humor sharp.

YOU BORN TODAY are a Gemini-Cancer cuspal and, as such, are endowed with the strongest traits of both Signs. You have the fine intellect, imagination and versatility of the Geminian plus the practicality, conservatism and meticulousness of the Cancerian — a potent combination. But you often lack confidence in yourself; become easily discouraged. Your love of home and family is outstanding, but you may be too strict a parent or spouse. You would make an excellent teacher but, here again, you will have to guard against being too stern a disciplinarian. Other lines in which you could excel: writing, music, medicine, the theater.

Industry eyes gas reserves

By TERESA C. PITTS
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Some major industries are trying to help themselves to Ohio natural gas reserves to circumvent a national fuel shortage.

The state Public Utilities Commission is considering at least two requests to tap eastern Ohio natural gas deposits on behalf of manufacturers.

Columbia Gas of Ohio, at Zanesville, has asked that Ford Motor Co. be allowed to use public pipelines to transport natural gas from recently acquired fields in Morgan County to its Avon Lake facility.

Ford promises to pay with gas for use of the pipeline. Any gas the Avon Lake plant couldn't use would be returned to Columbia for distribution to its local customers.

Ford also would underwrite half of the $450,000 it will cost Columbia to install pipes and other facilities to serve the Avon plant.

Ford wants to use the gas to fire ovens to dry paint on the bodies of Econoline Vans. Avon Lake is about 150 miles from the 20,000-acre Ford gas field in Morgan County.

A Cleveland firm, Micro Mineral Development Inc., has asked for basically the same set-up on behalf of northern and eastern Ohio industries.

Micro Mineral, which would utilize Eastern Ohio Gas Co. facilities, requests natural gas exploration authority for five years on an "emergency basis" to help industry through the fuel shortage.

Corporation President Leonard Gardner said "hundreds" of Ohio manufacturers had signed letters of intent to support the company if the PUCO grants the request.

There is some fear a favorable ruling on behalf of either request could trigger a stampede by big industrial companies to tie up Ohio's natural gas reserves, denying them to companies that are the only source of gas for residential and small commercial customers.

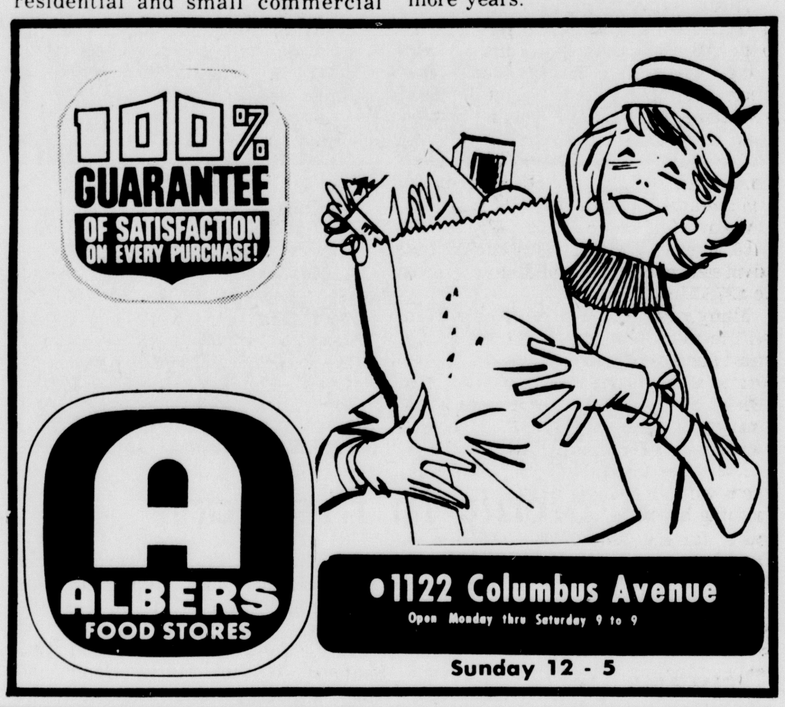

PUCO turned down a similar request last year from the Marion Brick Co.

But Gardner claims public gas sources would only be helped by such an arrangement.

"We could increase pipeline supplies by 15 to 20 per cent just in paying for pipeline use," he said.

Ohio's natural gas fields are located in the eastern half of the state. Gardner estimated that "with economical use" Ohio had enough gas to last 25 to 30 more years.

Conservative investing pays for founder of mutual fund

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK AP) — T. Rowe Price of Baltimore knows how to make money in the stock market. For each $100 he invested in 1934 he has a "total investment accomplishment" of $8,274.20, made up of both income and market appreciation.

This is no "on paper" dream such as is indulged in by timid people. It is in paper, the kind you and I use to buy things we need. It is real and it has been accomplished through conservative, long-term investing rather than trading.

The sum is really quite modest compared to what could have been. Price earned liberal income from his investments, some $1,225.74 for each $100 invested. Had he reinvested those dividends each $100 would have grown to $27,120.11.

Many investors will recognize Price as the man who founded some of the most successful mutual funds in recent years, a man who was described this week by Michael Lipper, a fund analyst, as "more right than almost anyone else for a long time."

But what Price did with his funds, from which he is now retired at 75, was nothing but what he was doing with his own family portfolios. "We'd cry together and we'd be happy together," he said in an interview.

Price's success began after 10 years experience in investments when, he said, he learned "I did not have the ability to correctly forecast the trends in the stock market."

This led him to concentrate on shares of "those companies which were still growing in size and profitability and stay with them for as long as they were operating in fertile fields and benefiting from capable management."

That was the beginning of his "Growth Stock Theory of Investment," which he practices successfully to this day, still insisting "it is not necessary to guess the stock market trends to be a successful investor."

The amateur, he states, "can be successful without benefit of experience and research," if he recognizes some basic market factors, of which these three seem as pertinent as any:

1. Most corporations, like people, pass through a life cycle of growth, maturity and decline."

Once a business is well established, he argues, "the greatest opportunity for gain is afforded during the early stages of growth in earnings per share. The risk factor increases after maturity is reached and decline begins."

2. "Earnings growth per share is the most important factor determining what a share in a business is worth."

3. "Change is the investor's only certainty." Change in social, political and economic trends, and changes in industry and company life cycles, requires changes in portfolios.

Price would sell some of his one-time growth stocks if it weren't for the large capital gains taxes he would have to pay. The companies, generally considered blue chips, are mature, beyond their growth stage.

Today's climate of inflation, "socialization of basic industries," mounting welfare costs and overpricing of some growth stocks has caused him to shift the industries he picks.

Prominent in his 1937 portfolios were automotive, building, chemical, electric equiping, public utilities, and miningsmelting stocks. Today he has added cosmetics, food and beverage, and pharmaceutical and health, all consumer industries, eliminating autos and building, and reducing chemical, metal and public utility stocks. He also owns considerable gold stock.

He is greatly concerned about world affairs, particularly the absence of an international monetary system and the acceptance of inflation. He feels that continued prosperity is unlikely without returning to goldbased currencies.

Price's views and a detailed record are included in a new, privately printed booklet "for friends and a few people in the financial world," called "A Successful Investment Philosophy Based on the Growth Stock Theory of Investing."

Asked why it was written he replied: "It had been my ambition for a long time to convince investors you don't have to know a lot about the stock market to make money."

Driveways have play dangers, AAA official warns

Safer than streets, home driveways are not always free of traffic danger for small children who seem to have no fear, warns Mrs. Fred Shoop, secretary-manager of the Fayette County Automobile Club.

It is estimated that several hundred children are killed and thousands injured each year while innocently playing in home driveways, says the AAA official. Strangely enough, the victims, generally under 5 years of age, are often struck by a car driven by one of their parents.

"These tragedies can be cut significantly with some added thought and caution by drivers and instruction by parents to children regarding the dangers of playing in a driveway," added the auto club spokesman.

When there is any chance of children in the area, Mrs. Shope urges that motorists circle their vehicles and check under them before entering. "Since most driveway mishaps occur when the vehicle is being backed, drivers should take the time to check again before starting, then keep a sharp eye until the movement is completed."

The AAA official also warns against parking in a garage or driveway without setting the parking brake and gear. She suggests locking the vehicle if there is any chance children may tamper with it and cause it to roll out of control.

The Cuyahoga River in Ohio became so polluted from oil and debris discharged in factory areas that it actually caught fire. The burning river damaged two railroad bridges.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

When I first saw Dr. Ricardo Tuazon's color photographs, it was at a great disadvantage but I admired them from a distance and planned to return for a closer look.

I was in a wheelchair being taken down a hospital corridor to the X-ray department when we passed an open office on whose walls a display of pictures was visible. At my request, the aide paused long enough for me to see that they were excellent photographs and to note the doctor's name on the door.

"It's like a photo gallery," the aide said. "Word gets around the hospital staffers drop in to have a look."

Some day later, when I recovered sufficiently to walk around, I headed down the hall to Dr. Tuazon's office. The door was open, no one was in . . . but the picture display encouraged inspection.

ABOUT 25 photos hung on three walls — beautiful color prints of scenics, sunsets, swans and flower closeups. Though the prints varied in subject matter, all of them were mounted similarly in a way that was distinctive and individualistic.

Each color photo was mounted flush to the edges of a one-inch-deep border frame. Most of the frames were rectangular but some were oval and a couple were circular. Most of the one-inch border frames were painted black but a few were painted in a color to harmonize with its color print.

Dr. Tuazon came in and smiled pleasantly as I expressed my interest in his photography. He was accustomed to strangers popping in to view his pictures.

"They've all been taken during my vacation travels," he explained, " . . . selections from trips to Europe, Hawaii and national parks in this country. There are so many impressive sights to see and I try to bring back some of the scenes and color. It's an added pleasure to find later that the pictures are enjoyed by others."

"WHAT ABOUT the way these pictures are mounted?" I asked.

"I didn't care for the usual type of photo frames," he replied. "I made these myself and each size, shape and color suits the particular photo on it. The one-inch border edges makes them stand out from the wall and the entire display becomes unified. However, each photo is an individual picture that can be appreciated without any distraction from an outlining frame."

Because so many viewers asked how the frames were made, Dr. Tuazon decided to save his time and theirs. He itemized the materials needed and procedure to be followed, mineographed the list and has it ready for questions. Here are the items and technique he uses:

MATERIALS AND TOOLS: Tempered masonite ½ inch . . . Wood strips (mahogany preferred) 1 inch x 1 inch . . . Contact wood cement (U.S. Plywood preferred, Weldwood) . . . Elmco White Glue (Franklin Glue Co.) . . . Tuffilm Spray (Grumbacher's) . . . C-clamps, 3 to 5 inch . . . Hand plane . . . Rolling pin or rubber print roller . . . Brush, 2 inches wide . . . Sandpaper, extra fine . . . Spray paint.

PROCEDURE:

1. Spray prints with Tuffilm.
2. Cut masonite to size — ¼ inch less than all 4 sides of print.
3. Cut and miter wood strips to size of masonite.
4. Glue wood strips to masonite with contact cement and clamp tight at four corners. Leave to dry overnight.
5. Plane edges of frame. Mask top of frame and spray-paint wood strips.
6. Sandpaper lightly top of frame.
7. Apply Elmco glue lightly and spread with brush. Wait a few minutes until glue is tacky.
8. Lay photograph from one edge and smooth out surface carefully with print roller of rolling pin.
9. Clamp or press print to frame for eight hours or overnight.
10. Trim print overlap with razor blade flush to side of frame.
11. Bevel edges with hand plane or sandpaper.
12. Spray wood border edges and face of photograph with Tuffilm or clear plastic spray.

AFTER THANKING Dr. Tuazon for this photo grame prescription for myself and this column's readers, I wanted to know a bit more about him.

He had studied medicine in his native Philippines and had come to the United States about 15 years ago. For the past 10 years, Dr. Tuazon has been a pathologist at Booth Memorial Hospital in Flushing, N.Y., specializing in taking and analyzing microscope slide pictures for medical diagnoses.

His hobby of photography also began about 10 years ago starting with an inexpensive mail order camera. He now carries a Nikon and Nikkormat camera on his travels and is especially fond of a macro lens for closeups.

He's ready to prescribe photography as good medicine for anyone wishing to preserve memories of places he's been to, and the good times he has had. It sounds like a universal prescription.

Costly gifts exchanged by leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The current summit talks have included an exchange of lavish gifts, with the White House explaining its gifts were donated by American firms.

Soviet Communist leader Leonid I. Brezhnev brought with him an antique silver Russian samovar, a silver-gilt water pitcher and a dozen stemmed goblets on a large tray, and a large Bokhara design rug for President Nixon.

For Mrs. Nixon there was a Russian china tea service for 12, a coffee service for 12, a half-dozen blue and white enameled silver-gilt tea glass holders and cut glass tea glasses, a white wool crocheted shawl and a malachite and bronze jewel box.

Nixon has given Brezhnev a $1,000 Lincoln Continental town car and a large supply of spare parts, which a spokesman said were provided by Ford Motor Co. for a "nominal fee."

The same was done by General Motors for the black Cadillac that Nixon gave Brezhnev last year, the spokesman said.

The White House also disciosed that the $12,000 Petersen rifle given by Nixon to Brezhnev was donated by its maker, as was a $5,000 Cybis porcelain grouping.

'Bill of Rights" protects consumers

By TERESA C. PITTS
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The hard-sell salesman tells you that an advertised special you wanted to buy isn't good quality. He sells you another item that costs more.

You have been duped.

But you can do something about it, report officials of the Ohio Department of Commerce. Since June 5, Ohio consumers have been protected by 11 new rights when they buy a product or a service.

This bill of consumer rights comes under the Ohio Consumer Sales Practices Act approved in 1972 by the 109th General Assembly. The act set up the consumer protection division of the commerce department and authorized it to write rules and regulations that would have the force of law.

The rules, written after lengthy public hearings, became effective June 5.

One of the rights specifically guards consumers against stores that lure customers by offering a bargain only to switch them to a higher-priced item.

"These bait-and switchers can and should be prosecuted," said a commerce department spokesman.

Bait-and-switch is one of more than 800 known consumer frauds and gyps in operation in Ohio.

Then there is the case of advertising showing a "roomful of furniture for $399." A disappointed furniture buyer discovers the "roomful" includes only a sofa and chair.

A second consumer "right" says that items displayed, but not included in an advertised price, must be clearly identified.

Small print is off-limits, too. All exclusions or limitations must be in a print size at least half as large as the main display type.

A newspaper ad offers a free record. Closer inspection reveals you also must buy the stereo.

Such advertisements are illegal, said commerce officials. No offer can legally be called a "bonus" or "gift" or "free" if it:

—requires that you buy another, more expensive item.

—is continuous or repeated over a long time.

—does not clearly state any terms, conditions or obligations on which it depends.

—requires that you purchase a low-quality item.

The "rights" also shield consumers from disreputable servicemen or repairmen.

If you have a washing machine repaired, the serviceman must give you a written estimate of repairs costing $25 or more; obtain authorization for additional costs of 10 per cent or more; and tell you if used parts will be returned.

Also, repairmen can not charge for unauthorized services, indicate repairs are necessary when they are not, tell you certain repairs have been made when they have not, or refuse a request for a written and itemized receipt.

A cartoon depicts a salesman showing a prospective buyer one side of an automobile, while someone is painting over the words "police" or "taxi" on the opposite side.

Selling used items as "new" is one of the biggest and most disreputable sales practices, one consumer protection spokesman said.

Under consumer protection regulations, you have legal recourse anytime a salesperson tells you an item is new or unused if it is not, or misleads you about extent of previous use.

Free prize offerings are legal only when all conditions under which they are offered are made clear, states another consumer law. It is illegal to tell a consumer that he is eligible to win or has won a prize if, in order to receive it, he is required to pay a service charge, handling charge or other similar charge.

Automobile salesmen have an undeserved reputation for cheating the consumer, commerce officials said. But often, unwary car-buyers can be trapped into paying for unreceived services if those services are not put in writing.

Consumer protection right No. 7 is simple: All statements made by salespersons about a motor vehicle must be included in a written contract.

Deposits or "good faith" money often lead to bad faith on the part of the buyer if he does not get specific deposit information in writing. Such information should guarantee that the seller does not continue to sell an item after he has accepted a deposit, and should include specific item and cost descriptions.

A seller is guilty of deception if he doesn't deliver promised merchandise, or later offers you other merchandise in place of your original request. If this happens, he is required to either deliver the item promptly, or refund your money.

A door-to-door salesman or telephone solicitor must indicate immediately that he or she is trying to sell you something.

These direct solicitations are not legal if:

—you are told falsely you have been "specially selected" to receive a product or service.

—you are told you have won a contest when you have not.

—you are not told of your right to cancel a contract within three days after signing it, or if you are given the wrong information on your right to cancel.

—you are told falsely the product cannot be bought elsewhere.

—you are told falsely you will receive a discount, rebate or other benefit for allowing your home or other property to be used as a "model" for advertising purposes.

Watch those afternoons! that's when colds strike

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The body's natural defense against colds and flu rises and falls in a daily cycle which hits its weakest point in the afternoon, a University of Southern California research team reports.

The natural protection against respiratory diseases afforded by the substance immunoglobulin is greatest from 2 a.m. to 8 a.m., the USC School of Medicine researchers said.

"Which is just when people don't need it, of course," Dr. Everett C. Hughes, head of the research team, said Monday.

Hughes said immunoglobulin, which neutralizes bacteria and viruses to protect against colds and flu and other respiratory diseases, is continually carried away by the mucous flowing from the nose and mouth to the stomach.

Hughes said the researchers found that immunoglobulin was not replenished steadily by the body, as previously thought.

"People make a lot more of it between 2 and 8 a.m. and they make a lot less of it in the afternoon between 1 and 8 p.m," Hughes said.

"There is a threefold difference between early morning and late afternoon."

The USC researcher said people are thus most susceptible to colds in the afternoon, when the body's production of immunoglobulin is at its lowest.

"If there's ever an epidemic, that's the time of day to go hide in a bar or go to bed and get away from people," he said.

Collectors' show set this weekend

A prediction of fair weather for the weekend points to another capacity influx of exhibitors and hobbyists at the Central Ohio Gun and Indian Relic Collectors Association's June show at the Fairground Saturday and Sunday.

Advance bookings have been heavy, according to Kenneth Craig, president of the association, and Coyt A. Stookey, secretary-treasurer.

The Mahan, Youth and Merchants buildings well be filled with a wide variety of collector material, and the popular summer flea market will spread over almost every square foot of the main exhibition ground.

There is no admission fee, but the usual 25-cent parking charge will be made.

Competition this month covers old powder flasks, and a trophy will be awarded, Craig said.

Members of the association are not allowed on the Fairground before noon Friday. Exhibitors will begin setting up at that time.

There were more than 700 stations at the May show. Attendance topped 4,000.

New home display Saturday

A three bedroom, bi-level home, the Crestwood, will be on display from 1 to 7 p.m. Saturday and Sunday on Anderson Road. The home will be shown by William L. Walters of Walters-Ridge Homes, 111 Draper St.

The home is one of 35 different custom-built homes being offered locally by Ridge Homes. The company has manufactured nearly 25,000 homes over the past 16 years.

The Crestwood is designed to combine the step-saving convenience of a ranch home with all of the extra play, entertaining and storage space of a two-story home. It features space for an 18 ft. 7 in. long family room, a den, powder room, laundry room and garage on the lower level, while the more formal living, dining and sleeping areas are on the upper level.

INCLUDED in the basic price of the home is wall-to-wall carpeting in a choice of six colors.

Also included in the price is a color-coordinated kitchen with a refrigerator - freezer, electric or gas range and range hood, Riviera cabinets and Formica counter-tops in a wide range of styles and colors. The bathrooms are available in a choice of five colors, including decorator style vanettes.

In all, Ridge Homes offers more than 1,000 choices of styles, colors and materials for roofs, siding, windows, peneling, carpeting, tile, lighting and plumbing fixtures.

Many Ridge home buyers do some of the interior finishing themselves, saving as much as $4,000.

Ridge dealers employ local construction workers and finance their homes through local lending institutions. In addition, Ridge Homes has its own financing plan with enables families with incomes of $6,500 to $15,000 to afford a custom-designed home.

Opening lead - ace of diamonds.

Here is a hand reported by Dr. James Parrack in the British Bridge Magazine. As usual, the doctor casts his favorite character, Ffred, in the role of hero.

Ffred was the dealer and opened one spade. It is true that most players would have opened two spades, but Ffred was seldom inclined to do what most players would do.

West overcalled with two diamonds and East raised the ante to five. This development did not faze Ffred, who bid five hearts in what can best be described as a forcing voice.

North thereupon came to life and raised Ffred to six, which West doubled after two passes. West led the ace of diamonds.

Ffred ruffed, of course, and played the king of hearts, East showed out. It is probably true that most declarers at this point would have shifted their attention to spades, but this prosaic thought did not cross Ffred's mind.

Instead he cashed the ace of clubs. When West's queen fell on it, Ffred's face lit up like a Christmas tree. Situations of this type were a source of great joy to him and he proceeded to bring home the contract in his customary bang-bang style.

He led the six of hearts and finessed the eight. Then, after ruffing the jack of diamonds with the queen of hearts, he led the seven and finessed the ten. After Ffred now cashed the ace of hearts, discarding his king of clubs on it, he was able to run dummy's five remaining clubs and thus score twelve tricks.

During the post-mortem, when Ffred was asked why he had not tried to establish the spades instead of the clubs, he replied, "What spades?"

Julie Eisenhower firmly backs Dad

By FRANCES LEWINE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Julie Nixon Eisenhower is the lone member of the President's family speaking out about Watergate these days and stauchly backing him up.

Like a political campaigner, she is accepting numerous public appearances, has appeared on television and speaks to a varied groups several times a week—even several times a day lately.

Julie is stepping up her schedule, while Pat Nixon is being seen less frequently.

The President's 24-year-old daughter has been receiving ovations — even kisses—for her efforts.

In two White House sessions this week with teen-agers— presidential scholars and Republican youth leaders—Julie took on questions, press-conference style in the East Room where her father has held his infrequent televised news conferences.

"If we took a poll now about how Watergate would affect Republicans (candidates), the results probabiy wouldn't be very good," Julie told the Teen-Age Republicans from across the country Wednesday.

"But," she explained, "that's because we have a lot of charges coming out of the hearings. We have a lot of hearsay. We don't have all the facts yet. We haven't heard from all the people who've been accused."

She got what she considered "a vote of confidence" for the President from the 240 teen-age GOP leaders who came to the White House reception.

For the next three years, Julie said: "I hope to be very active in my father's administration—taking a lot of speaking engagements and meeting groups."

"Did you and Mr. Eisenhower ever consider running for office? she was asked.

"I think we would consider it," said the President's daughter. But she said there weren't any definite plans.

Right now, after the White House, Julie said, she might go back to teaching. Her parents will be going to California. But her husband David suggested a retirement role for Nixon—as baseball commissioner.

Mini-bike accident hospitalizes boy, 14

A 14-year-old Washington C.H. youth was admitted to Memorial Hospital Wednesday night following surgery for injuries suffered in a mini-bike accident on the Fayette County Fairground.

Lowell Nelson Rudd, of 720 Clinton Ave., sustained a severe laceration of the thigh and minor abrasions in the 6:40 p.m. mishap.

Sheriff's deputies said Rudd lost control of his bike on a curve while riding on a Fairground drive. The bike traveled left of center, colliding with a bridge guardrail and throwing Rudd onto the pavement.

Officers said charges in the mishap are pending further investigation.

Sheriff's Deputies also investigated a minor hitship accident on the Jeffersonville-West Lancaster Road which occurred late Wednesday. Officers said a car ran off the roadway and damaged five rods of fence on property owned by Mrs. Howard Allen, of 624 Oakland Ave.

Probe Guard copter crash

AMELIA, Va. (AP) — The Army has launched an investigation into the crash of a helicopter near this southern Virginia community in which four members of the Ohio National Guard were injured.

An Army spokesman said engine trouble tentatively had been listed as the cause of the crash. The accident occurred just after noon Wednesday while the OH58 copter was on a training mission.

The men were identified Wednesday night by Lt. Col. Joseph P. E. McCann of the Ohio National Guard as:

WO Richard J. Russell, 36, of Russell Township, Ohio; CWO Harold L. Leimbech, 42, of Wellington, Ohio; Spec. 5 Joseph S. Benedik, 29, of Canal Fulton, Ohio; and Spec. 5 David A. Sebald, 24, of North Canton, Ohio.

The men were picked up by a second helicopter on the same flight and flown to Kenner Army Hospital in Ft. Lee, the Army said. One was treated and released and another later was transferred to the Portsmouth Naval Hospital.

Elvis replaces stolen Louisiana camp equipment

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Singer Elvis Presley, on learning that thieves had ravaged a Louisiana camp for needy boys, pledged $1,000 to get it ready for opening day.

"Elvis called me after reading about the thieves in the newspaper," said Col. Tom Parker, Presley's manager. "He told me to check into this and send them a check, and that's what I'm doing," Parker said in a statement telephoned here Wednesday.

Officials said robbers broke into the camp in Hogden Monday night and stole supplies donated for sessions that are to begin July 15. The camp is operated by volunteers of the Louisiana State Police.

Young fashion designers go for sensible elegance

By ANN HENCKEN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The theme was elegance when 12 young designers gathered to talk fashion.

They were a quiet, sensible group, short on bold ideas but long on adaptibility, nostalgia or smooth-looking commercial concepts.

They discussed their fashion philosophy Wednesday and showed fall clothes at a luncheon sponsored by the Wool Bureau, Inc., an organization for promotion and research in wool.

The audience was as interested in the rising wool prices— up 15 to 20 per cent—as they were in the styles.

However, some of the clothes were so nostalgic one viewer was prompted to ask: Why are you doing such old-looking clothes if you're supposed to be young designers?

"We think that glamour is important. Our contemporaries would like to have some of that back again. We love it. I don't see why we can't do it,' said designer Pinky Wolman of Pretty Boy Floyd, who showed a slicked-up flannel tuxedo with top hat.

She added that her generation had never enjoyed the glamour of clothes done in previous decades.

Another designer who must have been inspired by the question was Jonathan Hitchcock of Hitchcock, Ltd., who showed an above-the-ankle skirt and pulled-down sweater. Several said they had done some longer skirts for fall.

There were several versions of the big Seventh Avenue trends: the wrap coat, the elegant day dress and the tweed pants suit.

"If we change things too quickly, we make it impossible for a woman to keep her wardrobe over a period of years," said Jane Janedis of Kelita, who featured a conservative green tweed pants suit.

SEVEN GREAT REASONS FOR INSTALLING GENOVA CPVC HOT & COLD WATER PIPING SYSTEMS

EASIER TO WORK WITH — A tube cutter, brush and welding solvent are all you need to install a complete system.

SAVES TIME AND LABOR — With solvent welding, joints can be assembled in less than half the time required for copper or galvanized iron.

LIGHTWEIGHT — Genova CPVC pipe is 1-20th the weight of galvanized pipe. Reduces handling problems.

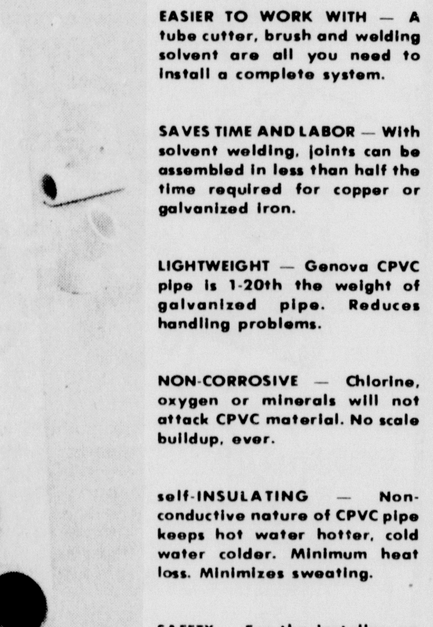

NON-CORROSIVE — Chlorine, oxygen or minerals will not attack CPVC material. No scale buildup, ever.

self-INSULATING — Non-conductive nature of CPVC pipe keeps hot water hotter, cold water colder. Minimum heat loss. Minimizes sweating.

SAFETY — For the installer, no hazards from torch flame, corrosive flux or hot solder. For the end used, no need to worry about a child accidentally getting burned by touching a hot water pipe.

Pitcher gets to bat as Chisox snap skid

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Who was that designated hitter? That was no designated hitter—THAT was Cy Acosta.

The Chicago White Sox player Wednesday became the first pitcher to hit for himself in the American League's Year of the Designated Hitter.

"I didn't realize he was the first one when I sent him up," said Chicago Manager Chuck Tanner after the White Sox' 8-3 victory over the California Angels.

Acosta's historic appearance was hardly worth it—he struck out.

An inning before Acosta got a chance to make incidental history, the White Sox had the game wrapped up. Pat Kelly's first home run, a three-run shot, highlighted a six-run seventh for Chicago.

The inning helped the White Sox break a five-game losing streak.

In the other American League games, the Cleveland Indians beat the Detroit Tigers 7-6; the New York Yankees trimmed the Baltimore Orioles 2-1; the Boston Red Sox turned back the Milwaukee Brewers 3-2 and the Texas Rangers blanked the Minnesota Twins 3-0.

George Hendrick knocked in the winning run with a single in the last of the ninth inning to power Cleveland over Detroit. Hendrick won Tuesday night's game for the Indians in exactly the same manner.

Hendrick, who also hit three home runs Tuesday night, hit another one for Cleveland Wednesday. The blast, his 14th of the season, came in the seventh inning and gave the Indians a 6-2 margin before the Tigers rallied to tie the game in the top of the ninth.

Designated hitter Jim Ray Hart hit a two-run homer and Sparky Lyle rescued Mel Stottlemyre from an eighth-inning jam to help New York beat Baltimore.

Stottlemyre had a one-hitter going until the Orioles mounted their biggest threat of the night in the eighth. Lyle came in with men on second and third and gave up a run on a ground ball before nailing down the victory. It was Lyle's 18th save, 11 of them in the Yankees' last 11 victories.

Kurt Bevacqua delivered the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the 12th inning to give Kansas City its triumph over Oakland. The A's tied the game 4-4 with two runs in the ninth on an RBI double by Gene Tenace and a sacrifice fly by Joe Rudi.

Rick Miller and Reggie Smith belted home runs and Bill Lee scattered nine hits to lead Boston over Milwaukee. It was the Brewers' third straight loss after 10 straight triumphs.

Sonny Siebert hurled a six-hitter and Vic Harris tripled in two runs, pacing Texas over Minnesota.

Bucs slip to basement

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"At this time of the year, it doesn't matter whether we are in first, last or fifth place," Pittsburgh Manager Bill Virdon was saying. "The only time that matters is the last day of the season."

The Bucs, defending champions in the National League East, took occupancy of the basement by losing 5-3 Wednesday night to the Chicago Cubs while the Philadelphia Phillies were scrambling into fifth place by edging the New York Mets 4-3. The Cubs retained their 4½-game lead over Montreal's surprising Expos and dumped the Pirates 9½ off the pace and half a game back of the Phillies. It was Pittsburgh's 14th loss in the last 18 games.

In the National League's other games, Cincinnati downed San Francisco 7-5, Montreal whipped St. Louis 5-1, San Diego turned back Houston 6-2 and Los Angeles beat Atlanta 6-5 in 11 innings.

The Phillies bounded into the heady atmosphere of fifth on the strength of Wayne Twitchell's four-hitter and run-scoring singles in the fifth inning by Terry Harmon, Willie Montanez and Greg Luzinski.

Those hits overcame the Mets' 3-1 lead, built in the fourth inning on Felix Millan's single, John Milner's triple, Ed Kranepool's sacrifice fly and Wayne Garrett's homer. Luzinski had doubled for the Phils' first run in the first inning.

Homers by Tony Perez and Hal King highlighted the Reds' six-run outburst that sent the Giants down to their ninth loss in the last 11 games. The homers countered clouts by Bobby Bonds and Tito Fuentes.

The Expos reeled off their ninth victory in the last 12 games on the strength of John Boccabella's three-run homer in a four-run third-inning that keyed a 13-hit assault against the Cardinals.

The Padres, halting their losing skid at 10 games, got a pair of runs-batted-in on a single and a sacrifice fly by Dave Winfield, the left fielder selected earlier this month in baseball's free-agent draft. Steve Arlin scattered nine Houston hits, one of them Doug Rader's eighth homer.

Dave Lopes walked, Bill Buckner singled, then Atlanta third baseman Darrell Evans booted Steve Yeager's two-out grounder, giving the Dodgers their victory, which widened their West Division lead over the Giants to three games.

Ruth victim attacks those who aid Aaron

SHANNON, Miss. (AP) — The man who gave up Babe Ruth's final two home runs says present-day pitchers should think about only one thing when they face Hank Aaron—if the Atlanta slugger is up against them seeking his 715th home run: knock him down.

"If I was pitching and Aaron came up needing one more homer to break Ruth's mark, I'd dust him off," says 70-yearold Guy Bush. "Anything to get him out of the game. He would know I'm not his friend."

Bush commented after several National League pitchers said they would not mind giving up Aaron's 715th home run, the one that would break Ruth's all-time home run record.

Bush had no kind words for those pitchers, nor for baseball Commissioner Bowie Kiuhn, who warned the pitchers they could be suspended for "helping" Aaron.

"I've never heard anything like what these pitchers are saying," Bush said. "It's absolutely criminal. If this happens, I'll be ashamed I ever played the game."

Bush says Kuhn was too soft on the pitchers. He says longtime commissioner, Judge Kenesaw Landis, would have dispensed quickly with such utterances.

"If Landis were the commissioner of baseball now," said Bush, who gave up Ruth's final two homers on May 25, 1935 in Pittsburgh, "he'd have this little matter cleared up in about one hour.

"I'm telling you that Judge Landis would have marched those boys into his office, deuniformed them, and sent them on their merry way with a permanent suspension.

"They would never have seen the inside of a major league park."

Rotary Wheels, Levi Boys notch wins in LL Majors

The Rotary Wheels moved into a crowded two-way tie for second place in the Little League Majors standings Wednesday night by topping Halliday's Mustangers in a 10-5 contest at Wilson Field.

In other Little League Majors action, Kaufman's Levi Boys scored a 7-1 win over Downtown Drug.

Action in the Little League minors at Armbrust Field saw the Junior Firemen post an 11-4 win over the Loafers and Helfrich pop the County Bank by a 16-1 count.

BRIAN DODDS hammered a home run and Freddie Jones, David Ginn and Steve Balahtsis contributed doubles for the Rotary Wheels, who notched their fifth win in seven starts to land in a second place tie with the Charge-A-Checks.

Todd Terrell and Joe Smith clouted back-to-back homers for the Mustangers, now 4-3 on the season. Jones and Belles hurled for the winners and Terrell was the losing pitcher.

Wheeler had a double and single and Sturgeon cracked a pair of singles in support of Forsythe's one-hit pitching performance in Kaufman's victory. Pritchett was the losing pitcher and Murphy had Downtown Drug's only hit of the game.

George Robinson's grand slam home run paced the Junior Firemen to their win over the Loafers.

Leisure slammed a home run to lead Helfrich's win over the County Bankers.

RIDDLE OUT AT PLATE — Washington C.H. Rodgers spins two-hitter

Booming bats snap Post 25's nosedive

By MIKE FLYNN
Record-Herald Sports Editor

Washington C.H. Post 25's American Legion baseball team, idled the past 10 days by poor weather, turned in an impressive showing in its season debut at the Washington Senior High School diamond Wednesday night.

Post 25 received a splendid two-hitter from lanky righthander Randy Rodgers and some powerful hitting from a total of 11 players to clobber Greenfield Post 298 in the South Central Ohio League clash 17-2.

SCOTT RIDDLE, Larry Rodgers and Alan Coppock sparked a solid 16-hit offensive attack as Washington C.H. snapped a three-game nosedive. It was Post 25's first win inside the SCOL pennant chase after a doubleheader loss 10 days ago.

Riddle, the smooth Post 25 leftfielder, slugged a three-run homer, a double and a single in four trips to the plate and knocked in a total of five runs. Larry Rodgers smacked a solo home run and a double while Coppock had a perfect night at the plate with three hits in three trips including a double and drove in three runs.

Randy Rodgers, in his first starting assignment of the summer campaign, handcuffed the Highland Countians as he permitted a hit in the third and another in the fourth. The hard-throwing Madison Plans product whiffed a total of eight Greenfield hitters and retired the last 10 men he faced. Only one of Greenfield's runs was earned and Rodgers issued three walks.

Manager Tom Cole's Greenfield team, which suffered its sixth straight setback inside the SCOL, sent three hurlers to the mound in an attempt to quiet the booming Post 25 bats. Larry Crabtree was tagged with the loss after working only two and two-thirds innings. Post 25 roughed Crabtree up for eight runs on nine hits. He was followed to the hill by Steve Willett and Chris Nelson with the latter being the most effective after yielding two runs on three hits in two innings of duty.

Post 25 zipped to a 2-0 lead after two innings, but erupted for six runs in the third inning when a total of 10 batters strolled to the plate. Doubles by infielder Steve Haines and Coppock highlighted the inning. Crabtree faced nine Post 25 hitters in the inning before he was yanked in favor of Willett.

IT DIDN'T take long for Washington C.H. to figure out Willett as the Fayette Countians rode a three-run blast by Riddle, two walks, three Greenfield fielding miscues and a perfectly-executed squeeze bunt by outfielder Mark Johnson to a seven-run explosion.

Ten batters also appeared in the productive fourth inning before Willett could work his way out of the mess.

Manager Dennis Morris, with a lopsided 15-2 lead and facing the prospect of five games in the next four days, substituted freely in the fifth inning. The Post 25 subs quickly touched Nelson for two runs in the fifth inning to cap the one-sided contest.

Haines was a key in Post 25's offensive punch as he had a double in two official trips and scored three runs. Catcher Paul England continued his torrid hitting streak with a single in three appearances.

Joe Stewart and Doug McElwee accounted for Greenfield's only hits, both singles.

Post 25, now 1-3 on the season, travels to Miamisburg tonight for a non-league contest.

Jeff, Good Hope post Babe Ruth loop wins

Jeffersonville kept pace with Willis Insurance in the Fayette County Babe Ruth League pennant chase by nudging the Medics in a 7-6 struggle Wednesday night at the Jeffersonville diamond.

In other Babe Ruth League action, Good Hope squeezed past Wilson Chevrolet in an 8-7 tussle at Roszmann Field.

Coach Ron Helmick's Medics erased Jeffersonville's 6-1 lead with a five-run outburst in the seventh inning to knot the score 6-6, but the Jeff team came up with a run in the bottom of the eighth inning to post its fourth victory in five summer outings.

PHILIP SWIGERT, who relieved starter Tyree, picked up the win for Jeffersonville as he hurled one and two-thirds innings of no-hit baseball.

Sizemore and Smith sparked a 12-hit attack for Jeffersonville as each doubled and singled while Spears had three singles and Tyree contributed a pair of hits.

Johnson doubled to pace the Medics' effort and Jones was the losing hurler.

Home runs were featured in the Wilson Chevrolet-Good Hope contest.

Waters slugged a two-run homer in the third inning and also had a pair of singles to ignite a six-hit attack for Good Hope, now 2-2 on the year.

Randy Gardner clouted a grand slam home run in the first inning when Wilson Chevrolet zoomed to a 5-2 lead and later added a solo homer and a double in a six-hit effort.

Brant Dunn provided ample backing in Good Hope's attack with a double and Dean Shonkwiler had a pair of singles for Wilson, which suffered its fifth straight setback.

Stewart started for Good Hope, but was relieved after one-third of an inning when Wilson exploded for five runs. Bakenhester came on to work six and two-thirds innings, giving up three runs on five hits and picked up the win when Good Hope scored three runs in the top of the seventh inning to erase Wilson's 6-5 lead.

DEWEY FOSTER started for Wilson and hurled six and two-thirds innings before he was relieved by Dee Foster.

Wilson Chevrolet catcher Scott Sefton was injured in the contest when he was hit in the back of the head while preparing to bat between innings. Sefton was taken to Fayette Memorial Hospital where three stitches were required to close the cut. Wilson coach Gary Dunn said Sefton is expected to be out of action for about two weeks.

Tourneys close gap in Wednesday loop

The Tourneys tightened the race in the Wednesday Night golf league by scoring a 12-8 win over Maxfli at the Washington Country Club.

The win left the Tourneys only a point and a half off the pace of the league-leading Staffs.

Irvin Reeves shot a 44 to pace the Tourneys over Maxfli and in other action, the Staffs, behind Everett Rudolph's 44, scored a 12½ to 7½ win over the Reds. Robert Herron, subbing for Hayward Johnson, had a fine 39 for the Reds.

Gordon McCarty fired a 45 and four other players had identical 48s in the Dots' 13-7 win over the Titleists.

Wottle runs sizzling mile to turn back Prefontaine

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — "I knew I had him after three laps," exulted Dave Wottle, victor over Steve Prefontaine Wednesday night in a sizzling mile clocked at 3:53.3.

Another Olympic gold medal winner, Rod Milburn, equaled his own world record in the 120-yard high hurdles at 13.0 seconds. No one was within 10 yards at the finish.

How fast could he have gone? "I know it would have been under 13.0," said Milburn, the NCAA champion from Southern University.

The performances of Wottle and Milburn were the highlights in a nearly impromptu track and field meet attended by 12,000 delighted fans. The meet was pulled together during the past three weeks to raise funds to restore the west grandstand at Hayward Field, where the University of Oregon has developed so many distance runners.

Wottle and Prefontaine leave for Europe this month for a summer's campaign against Europe's best.

Skip Kent of Wisconsin, who won the 880 collegiate title in 1:47.2, ran a lifetime best of 1:56.4 in winning that event.

Randy Williams, Olympic gold medalist from Southern California, lost to UCLA's James McAlister in the long jump. McAlister leaped 26 feet 7½ inches. Williams was second at 26-1¾.

Oregon's Mac Wilkins never got a chance to go after Randy Matson's collegiate record in the discus. Wilkins, who won the AAU title Saturday with a throw of 211-11, pulled a groin muscle while hurdling in practice Tuesday.

World record holder Jay Silvester won the discus with a throw of 202-9. Olympian Tim Vollmer, formerly of Oregon State, took second at 202-3.

Reds win fourth straight

Driessen stays hot in Cincy's 7-5 win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two weeks ago Dan Driessen was "just having fun" tearing up the American Association for Indianapolis. Today the Cincinnati Reds' rookie third baseman is just about the hottest hitter in the National League.

Driessen collected three hits for the second straight game against generous San Francisco pitching Wednesday helping the surging Reds to their fourth straight victory, a 7-5 conquest of the Giants.

"I thought I'd be struggling — after all, this is the big leagues," said Driessen, who triggered a six-run, fourth inning rally with an infield hit and ended it with a run scoring single.

Driessen now has 16 hits in 38 trips for a .421 average after his first 11 major league games.

He was batting .409 at Indianapolis at the time of his recall after hitting at a .360 clip for the Reds in spring training.

"I really don't know why I'm going so well," Driessen said.

"I'm just going up, seeing the ball and hitting it. I was a little worried when they called me up because I was just having fun hitting at Indianapolis.

Two other newcomers joined Driessen in contributing to the victory, following in the footsteps of newly-acquired Fred Norman, who shut out the Giants Tuesday night.

Lefthanded reliever Dave Tomlin, whose previous major league experience included four games and five earned runs in 6 1-3 innings of work, retired the only 10 Giants he faced to save the victory for Don Gullett, 7-5.

Catcher Hal King, who has seen major league action with the Pirates, Braves and Randers, made his first appearance as a Red and responded with a towering homer to right field in the fourth.

"I thought I pitched well enough to make the club this spring, but they wanted experience," said Tomlin. "I was pitching well at Indianapolis (1.17 ERA) and I knew the Reds were having pitching trouble so I was hoping I'd get called up."

The Giants, who have dropped nine of their last 11 games while their pitchers have yielded 71 runs, had little to cheer about except for the persistent power hitting of leadoff batter Bobby Bonds.

When Bonds opened the first inning with his 18th homer it represented his 22nd career leadoff homer, a new National League record. Eddie Yost holds the major league mark with 28 homers starting a game.

Righthander Elias Sosa, 4-1, made his first major league start and had his ERA balloon from 2.13 to 3.21 as the Reds erupted in the fourth.

"When you score five runs a game it should be enough to win with any kind of decent pitching," lamented Giants' manager Charlie Fox. "Taking Sosa out of the bullpen is robbing Peter to pay Paul, but someone has to do the job."

Ted Uhlaender sold by Cincinnati Reds

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Outfielder Ted Uhlaender, 34, retired and working on his family cattle ranch at McAllen, Texas, has been sold to the Iowa Oaks of the American Association by the Cincinnati Reds.

Uhlaender had a .263 lifetime batting average and broke into the majors in 1966 with Minnesota. He went to the Cleveland Indians in 1970.

Cincinnati acquired him in a trade for pitcher Milt Wilcox in 1972 and planned to use him as a pinchhitter.

Colonial Stair grabs early margin in slo-pitch derby

Colonial Stair grabbed a comfortable lead in the Fayette County Softball Association's Class A slo-pitch league by winning two games in Wednesday night's action at Eyman Park.

The Colonial Stair bunch pumped thier league record to an unblemished 3-0 level by downing Robertson Fence, of Mount Sterling, in a 21-10 slugfest and topping always-tough Jeffersonville Merchants by a 15-7 score in the league's nightcap.

A five-hit spree by Mike Henry guided Colonial Stair to the win over Robertson Fence, while Keith Guthrie and G.K. Harris clouted home runs in the victory over the Jeff Merchants.

In other Class A league action Wednesday, Colin Leeth's four-hit spree carried Bell-Dor-Lite to a lopsided 23-5 win over Cascade Manufacturing, of Springfield. Ray Smith, Rick Bartruff and Joe Knisley provided ample backing in the Bell-Dor-Lite attack with three hits apiece.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG

There are times, when doing rough work where appearnace is not important, when it is better to use a cheap paint brush.

Those times are few and far between.

A good quality paint brush doesn't just last longer. It gives you better service right from the start. It picks up more paint, which means less dipping and effort.

The paint goes on smoothly without excessive dripping and splattering. The bristles are set securely in the ferrule and do not shed easily. A good brush gives excellent results all the time. A poor brush never gives good results, even when it is new.

The bristles of a good brush should feel springy and elastic. They should have splits or "flags" at their ends, an aid in spreading the paint evenly.

EXCEPT for professional painters, few persons get the full life out of brushes. There nearly always comes a time when, after a paint job, a brush is hastily and improperly cleaned or not cleaned at all. Then, when the brush gets hard or dirty, it appears to be too much trouble to salvage it with a chemical cleaner and it is discarded. Even if it is put back into shape, it means unnecessary expense.

A brush should be cleaned as soon as you are through using it, the one exception being when it is to be used again in a few hours or the next day. Then it must be suspended in the proper solvent (turpentine or mineral spirits for oil paints, enamel and varnish; water for water-based or rubber-based paints; denatured alcohol for shellac; lacquer thinner for lacquer.

The trouble with that procedure is that sometimes you never get back to the project in the planned time, the solvent evaporates and you have a hard-brush problem.

After cleaning a brush with the proper solvent, it should be washed with a mild detergent and water and wrapped in wax paper, aluminum foil, oilcloth or any similar type of wrapping.

Be certain that, whichever way the brush is stored, the bristles are not kept in a bent position.

Some authorities do not favor the use of water on any brush used for oil paint, varnish, lacquer or shellac, but the results are satisfactory if you do not soak the brush and do not use a strong alkali soap.

A VARNISH brush should be used only for varnish, a paint brush only for paint, and so on. A nylon brush should not be used for shellac.

Place an identifying mark on each brush handle to indicate what it was used for the previous time.

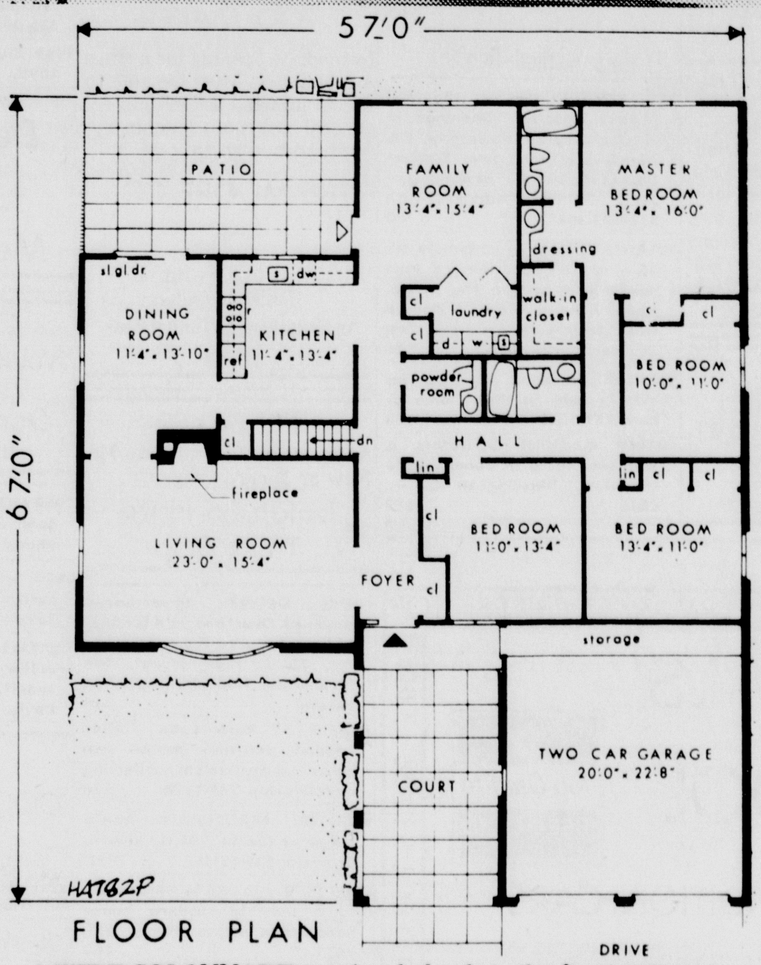

You should have the right kind of brush as well as the right quality. For large, flat surfaces, a 4-inch brush is about right. For woodwork, paneling and trim, use a trim or sash brush 2 or 3 inches wide.

A flat or oval sash brush from 1 to 3 inches wide is best for sashes, trellises and things of that nature.

For furniture, toys and objects with small, flat surfaces, there are flat enamel or varnish brushes, chiseled to permit easier flowing.

Here's the Answer

Q. — I need some help in one aspect of finighing the attic in our Cape Cod house. In considering how to make a door opening, I am puzzled as to whether it must be reinforced at the top and sides or whether this step can be skipped.

Isn't the reinforcement required only when it's part of a load-bearing wall. In this case, it definitely is not a load-bearing wall since I am building it from scratch.

A. — You're right that a wall of the type you mention will not be load-bearing; that is, it won't be helping to support the roof or a floor above. But you still must put extra 2 by 4s above the door frame and at each side of it.

Those extra pieces of lumber will keep the frame intact under the stress it will undergo each time the door is opened and closed. The difference is that, with a load-bearing wall, the extra pieces must be heavier and stronger lumber.

Q. — Our attic has subflooring that is rough but strong and apparently well built. I want to put down resilient tile flooring. I have been advised that I will first have to lay a regular floor over the subfloor and then place the tiles on that. Can't I put the tiles down right over the subfloor?

A. — It is not wise to lay the tiles directly on the subfloor. But neither do you have to install a regular floor. What you need is an underlayment of either hardboard or plywood on which the tiles can be placed.

The 4 by 4 sheets are easiest to handle. Merely nail them to the subfloor, with about a 16th of an inch space at the joints and you will have a solid, smooth surface for the tiles.

Q. — The old gypsum board walls in the children's room are in such bad shape that I want to replace them. Do I have to take down the old boards to put up new ones? I plan on using the same kind.

A. — No. You can put new gypsum wallboard over old. However, it would be wise to place a vapor barrier between the two. Plastic film will do.

Or you might consider a type of wallboard that has a vapor barrier on one side of it. It's more expensive than the plain, but will save you time and trouble.

Blob on Painesville lawn declared only a slime mold

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — What do you do with a blob on your lawn?

Debby Chapman of Painesville kicked the one that cropped up in her back yard.

It bled. She said it looked like blood.

Her mother called the sheriff. He called the Environmental Protection Agency in Painesville. That agency notified its Columbus office and sent a staff worker to the Chapman home to watch the blob.

The sheriff thought it bore watching too. He sent a couple of deputies.

The blob, surrounded by authority, spread out on the lawn for the night.

The EPA began investigating. The red pancake-like blob was sent to the office of Dr. Kenneth Applegate of the EPA water quality division.

Applegate recognized the blob as a slime mold, a not-uncommon occurrence during extremely wet weather.

Dr. John A. Schmitt of the botany department at Ohio State University said most slime molds grow on dead organic matter and this one probably was growing on dead grass. He said they are "really quite common", but that people don't usually notice them.

Schmitt said they are not known to cause disease in humans, although a few people may be allergic to the spores. A combination of water and temperature accounts for their sudden, rapid growth.

Applegate said the slime mold found at the Chapman home belongs to a class of molds distinguished by their ability to move. The red blob can slide about very slowly like an amoeba, he said.

"I didn't actually see it, but I could have sworn it moved a few inches up the sidewalk," Mrs. Chapman said.

Most people don't notice them, despite their abundance, because they only show up on wet days, Applegate said.

The WEEDERS GUIDE

The time has come to worry — if you must — about how green the grass will grow on your side of the fence.

The lawngrass growers are doing a great deal to give you better grass but you still have to help make it stay attractive. There are many new varieties of grass.

Our friend Dr. Robert W. Schery of The Better Lawn and Turf Institute says each one is worthwhile for some useful role — as backup species in lawn mixtures, for places where the going is tough for less well-adapted varieties, or where lawns must respond to local peculiarities, uses, and preferences.

"We have come to realize that the best way to combat lawn disease is to use disease-resistant grasses rather than undertake tedious fungicide sprayings," says Schery. "Perhaps the day is not distant when we will also have varieties unpalatable to insects such as sod webworms."

The newer cultivars, Schery reported, are selected for nice density at a lower mowing height than was suited to older types. They generally have "prettier" texture, deeper color, longer season, faster seed sprouting and more aggressive spreading.

SCHERY contends that proper feeding is perhaps the most neglected means of weed control. You'll get help in this respect from slow-release plant food made to order for turf.

The experts reminds that not all varieties are best suited to all regions. Cool weather varieties generally are available in seed. The better southern turfgrasses, Schery says, come mostly from plugs, sprigs or sod.

He recommends that from the border states southward, cool weather grasses be used only in favorable situations, such as partial shade, north-facing slopes, good soils, mowed taller than usual, and watered properly in hot weather. Some grasses that do well in coastal areas can't take rugged midwest weather. Blending varieties to meet special conditions is a good system.

HERE ARE some new bluegrasses:

Adelphi, from Rutgers University, dark green, intermediate texture.

Arboretum, from Missouri, durable in southern parts of bluegrass belt.

Arista, from Europe, a strong performer in seed blends.

Baron, from Holland, lowgrowing.

Bonnieblue, from Rutgers, durable hybrid, very dark green.

Fylking, soft-green prize from Sweden.

Galaxy, also from Rutgers, intermediate texture, dark green.

Merion, traditional standard of excellence.

Nugget, outstanding, from Alaska, dark green, dense carpet.

Pennstar, fine-textured, beautiful.

Prato, from Europe, good compaion in seed mixtures.

Sodco, slow-growing, may need less mowing, derived from Purdue University selections.

CLEMSON UNIVERSITY reports that Penncross bentgrass and Jamestown fescue maintain excellent density no matter how low they are cut — even at heights low enough to cause most grasses to lose their foliage and require regeneration of new shoots to survive.

Both varieties have short leaf stalks and strongly bend-back leaf blades.

Home lawns of bentgrass are typically mowed at least a half inch tall and those containing fescues at an inch or more.

Dinah's George does it himself

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

A wifely nudge may be all that is needed to awaken the latent talents of a do-it-yourselfer, advises actor George Montgomery, commenting on his 28 years in the big world of build-it-yourself.

For him it happened when he was married to Dinah Shore. In 1945 he reconstructed the rotting doors of her station wagon, and she promptly bought him a lathe and "on every conceivable occasion" gifted him with work tools.

The rugged, handsome six-footer went on to become the movie colony's best known do-it-yourself as he maintained his acting career.

He began by making furniture—mostly early American — first a Windsor bench and then Queen Anne, and he built houses which are now getting to be collectible. He is always learning new things. He can now install plumbing.

"When we bought a very small ouse on a marvelous piece of property, I really got with it," he observed. "With a couple of carpenters I added some 8,000 square feet, which included a big projection room."

He built a workshop in the backyard of that house in Encino, Calif., but later a complete factory was built in a properly-zoned area, and he has had as many as 15 cabinet workers helping him turn out his designs, which he always draws right on the lumber. He liked to do raised paneling, cabinets, doors, wood trim, finishing it in the factory and carting it to the house site.

In a short time the word had become "let George do it" as the Alan Ladds, Gary Coopers, Fred McMurrays and Bill Bendixes — among his first customers — come to ogle and then say, "that is just what we need." He gutted and remodeled Robert Taylor's house and filled the Jack Webb house with his furniture.

IMPROVISATION may be the key in maintaining interest, he insists. His ideas evolve as he proceeds. At the moment he is more or less thinking about the kind of furniture he wants to put in his new house at Palm Springs. Pueblo-style of crude stucco and adobe brick, it will be unique, he explained. Huge boulders are to partition a split level area with the help of a 130-ton leased crane. Cave-like showers will be built right into rock formations. A bar and barbecue will overlook a reflector pool.

"But the most important part of the house is the foundation — I always make them wider and deeper than necessary — and I always make sure the house is properly braced," he remarked. City codes keep most builders on their toes, but a lot of slipshod building occurs in those two areas."

The house will be big even though he is a loner, who entertains only occasionally. His children, Melissa 24, and John, 19, might visit.

Montgomery "turned plumber," he said, the day he was presented with a bill of $263 for labor and $71 for materials by two plumbers for a couple of hours work at the factory.

"People do no realize they can do such jobs until they try. After an earthquake busted a couple of lines under the slab floor at my house I picked up some pipe and elbows and replumbed the whold house when I moved the lines to the attic. I've already put in the septic tanks and sewer lines at the new house site and I'll save about $8,000 doing my own plumbing, I figure."

In addition to preparing for two movies in Yugoslavia and Thailand, and supervising the house and furniture plans, he will tour 20-or-so cities as a consultant on wood finishing for Johnson Wax, for whom he has done some television commercials. It will be a labor of love. He will be talking about something he knows a lot about, he says. His furniture is mostly solid wood, some with burl inlay. He incises some objects. He feels there is nothing duller than wood without some configuration, "But I really don't need to do anything-any more if I don't want to," he says. "And I build my houses for easy-care."

HIS PRESENT 7,000-square-foot, Mediterranean-style house overlooking all of Beverly Hills has been planned so that it doesn't require a housekeeper — he can vacuum the whole thing in less than an hour.

Montgomery furniture is collectible but not bargain-priced. A set of Queen Anne — chairs and dining table, Welsh dresser — originally sold for $7,000 but was recently resold at $24,000. A desk appraised at $1,500 cost him $275 to make, he proudly observed. He estimates he has turned out thousands of pieces of furniture in his career. When Johnson wanted to show some of his pieces in New York recently, Montgomery located a truckload of it right there.

His large hands — "I milked about 30 cows a day as a boy on our ranch in Montana" — need to be kept busy with the manual work he loves, he says. At 12, he was an A-plus student in mechanical drawing and art, and bold enough to redraw plans for a house his father was building for his sister. A good deal of the appreciation he feels for early American furniture and architecture was inspired by his friendship with Watson Webb Jr., a Hollywood film editor, who now heads an early American restoration project begun by his family in Massachusetts.

Damaged car burns; arson seen possible

A 1962 model car, apparently involved in a slight accident, was destroyed by flames on Creek Road at Rock Bridge Wednesday night. Sheriff's deputies are investigating the possibility of arson as the cause of the fire.

Sheriff's deputies said the car, bearing no license plates, ran off the road and knocked over two road signs near the bridge. A five gallon can, which has apparently contained gasoline, was found near the front of the car.

Wayne Township firemen were called to the scene to extinguish the blaze. Washington firemen were originally called to the fire but were unable to cross Rock Bridge due to the high water.

The incident is still under investigation.

FOUR DAYTON AREA men are being held in the county jail, charged with breaking and entering a vending machine at a U.S. 35 and I-71 service station Wednesday morning.

The four charged were James T. Horn, 19, Gary L. Shock, 21, Michael I. Blanchard, 20, and David K. Burdett, 19.

According to the Sheriff's Department's report on the incident, the four were apprehended in Madison County and then returned here. They were arrested after the attendent at Yeoman Gulf station, noticed the four flee from the soft drink vending machine which had been forced open.

Only $2 in change was removed from the machine.

The four are scheduled to appear in Municipal Court Thursday afternoon.

Howard W. Kelly, Rt. 1, New Holland, reported the theft of a land leveler from a building lot on Washington-Waterloo Road Wednesday. He said the leveler had apparently been loaded onto a truck or trailer and hauled away. The machinery was valued at $225.

Mexican jet crashes; fear 27 are dead

PUERTO VALLARTA, Mexico (AP) — An Aeromexico jetliner with 27 persons aboard crashed near a village south of here Wednesday night on a flight from Houston, Tex.

Authorities said they had no early word on whether there were survivors.

A partial passenger list indicated there may have been several Americans on the flight. Fourteen of the passengers who started the flight in Houston remained aboard after the first stop in Monterrey, Mexico.

The fiery crash occurred about 11:30 p.m. EDT after the plane apparently exploded over Banderas Bay while on a final approach to the Puerto Vallarta airport.

Weather conditions were reported good at the time.

After stopping here, the plane was to make stops in Acapulco and Mexico City.

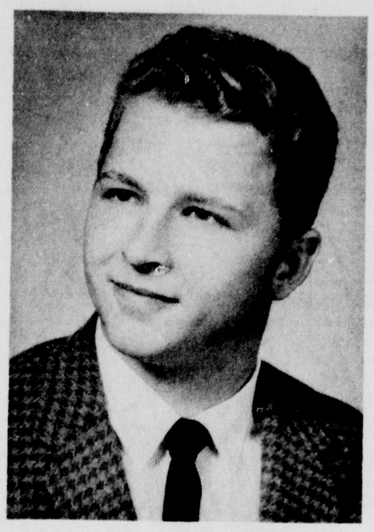

Several Puerto Vallarta residents and the airport traffic control officer reported seeing a fiery flash in the sky over the sea as the DC9 approached the city.

Pedro Vega, the Puerto Vallarta police commandant, said the plane crashed against a hill near the small village of Chimo, about 25 miles from here on the Pacific coast. Rescue teams used boats to reach the crash scene. Land travel along the mountainous coast is difficult.

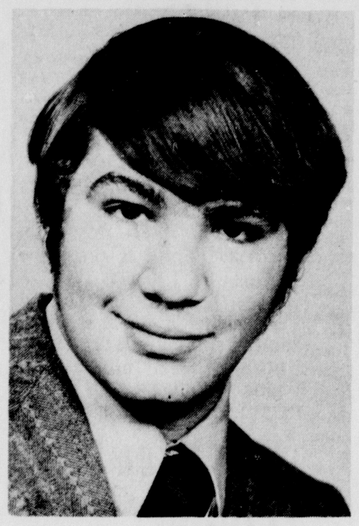

The control tower officer said the pilot, Capt. Carlos Fernandez de Lara, apparently had no problems as he was cleared for a final approach at about 14,000 feet over the Pacific ocean.

The officer said Fernandez de Lara tested his landing lights and suddenly there was a bright flash.

Aeromexico, formerly known as Aeronaves de Mexico, is a government-owned airline that has many international flights. This was the line's first major crash in several years.

Zoners table church issue

One variance was granted, and a request for another was tabled at a meeting of the Washington Zoning Board of Appeals Wednesday night.

Tabled was a request by the First Baptist Church for a conditional use permit to construct a new sanctuary at 212 S. North St. within one foot of an adjoining property. Church officials reported they have a verbal option to purchase the adjoining property.

The board tabled the request until a written agreement is reached between the two property owners.

A variance was granted to Ronald Shackelford, 822 Briar Ave., to operate a part-time bicycle repair business in his garage.

Jailed man asks extension of prison stay

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — Richard D. Leuw pleaded guilty to two counts of forgery and asked a favor of the judge.

Would the judge mind if he stayed on in the Cumberland County prison for awhile longer instead of being transferred right away?

Leuw, of nearby York, said he had made arrangements for relatives to visit him at Carlisle in July and recounted: "I have made a lot of stops in my life, but the county prison is one of the best."

With a smile Judge Clinton Weidner said, "Don't say that too loud. We may become overpopulated at the prison."

Leuw got the extension.
